TEUTONS LOSE 2ND BIG FORT TO CZAR

London Hears Austrians Prepare to Evacuate Lemberg; Kaiser, Alarmed, Plans Visit to Front

London, June 10.—New gains for the Russians on the Austrian front, including the reported capture of the Volhynian fortress of Dubno, and a fresh advance by the Germans near Verdun are the outstanding features of today's war news.

A Petrograd dispatch says: "The capture of 5,597 more Austro-Hungarians by the Russians, including 97 officers and eleven guns in Volhynia and Galicia, was officially announced today. This brings the total of prisoners in the present drive to nearly 72,000."

HINDENBURG ON DEFENCE.

The Austro-Hungarians have evacuated the Volhynian fortress of Dubno, according to a dispatch transmitted by the Rome wireless service today. Dubno is one of the triangle fortresses in Volhynia. It was captured by the Teutons during von Mackensen's drive last year.

The German armies of Field Marshal von Hindenburg are now co-operating with the Austro-Hungarians in a desperate effort to check the victorious offensive of the Russians between Pinsk and Bessarabia.

With between 70,000 and 72,000 prisoners in the hands of Russians, the battle is continuing fiercely, especially on the Strypa River and west of Lutsk. At some points, the Russians have gained from forty to fifty miles of territory in their mighty offensive.

All of Galicia east of the Carpathian Mountains is menaced by the huge steam roller which Czar Nicholas has set in motion under the active leadership of General Brusiloff.

RUSSIAN LOSSES LIGHT.

The Russian drive is declared to be a much more brilliant operation than the German offensive led by von Mackensen last year. In a week the Russians have gained more ground and prisoners than were captured during the first five weeks of the Austro-German offensive.

In the extreme southern end of the line, the iron ring of the Russians is drawing closer and closer to Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina.

Russian losses have been very light.

The effect of the victorious drive of the Czar's armies is already being felt in the West, and its present effect is strongly marked in Roumania.

A Central News dispatch from Bucharest states that the Governor of Lemberg, Galicia, has been ordered by the Austro-Hungarian military authorities to prepare to evacuate the city.

A Copenhagen dispatch says General Brusiloff, the Russian field commander, is being driven a wedge between the German and Austro-Hungarian armies, exposing the flanks of both. It is reported that the Kaiser, highly alarmed by the situation on the East front, is preparing to hasten there.

Berlin gives the following account of the new German gains at Verdun and the fighting elsewhere:

"West front—West of the Meuse we have carried out effective artillery fire. East of the river the enemy has been driven out of several positions southwest of Douaumont, in Chapitre woods and on Fumin ridge.

"West of Vaux we captured an enemy work together with 500 men."

Italian Troop Ship Torpedoed, Fear 500 Killed

Rome, June 10.

AN Italian transport with 1,000 troops on board has been sunk in the Adriatic Sea by Austrian submarines.

The Admiralty announced:

"The Principe Umberto, while conveying troops and war materials and while escorted by destroyers was attacked in the lower Adriatic by two Austrian submarines. She was struck by a torpedo and sank in a few moments.

"Although prompt aid was rendered, it is feared half of the troops on board perished."

HINT MOVE FOR PEACE BY WILSON

President Expected to Appeal for Armistice During Which Nations Shall Discuss War End

By International News Service.

Washington, June 10.—A high official stated today that President Wilson may make a deaite move in the interest of world peace soon after the adjournment of the St. Louis convention.

The plan being considered, it was said, is the sending of an identical note to all the belligerent governments, urging them to suspend military operations for a fixed time, and to appoint representatives to a conference at which peace proposals might be considered.

FAVOR ARMISTICE.

It was said that President Wilson has been urged not to wait for the warring nations to define their terms, in the hope that when the peace conference assembles all preliminary preparations will be swept aside and a definite peace signed upon principles to be agreed upon by the plenipotentiaries sitting around the "green table."

Those who desire the President to take this step are said to believe that if the belligerents would declare an armistice to discuss peace the fighting never would be renewed.

The President is said to realize the difficulty of persuading the belligerents to assent to an armistice. The official declared, however, the President might make the appeal in the name of Humanity and Civilization as well as of the United States. He would impress upon all, it was said, the fact that the United States was not moving in the interest of any particular nation or nations, but that this government was at heart the common good of the whole world.

PUBLIC APPEAL.

It was said that if the President decides to make the appeal, it will be done publicly, in accordance with his belief that secret diplomacy has brought upon Europe many of its ills, and that, if fair consideration and a spirit of conciliation obtained in the chancelleries of Europe, the war might soon be brought to an end.

TWO FISHERMEN LOST IN THE FOG

The fishing schooner Matthew F. Greer, Captain Greer, docked at Fish Pier yesterday with her colors at half mast. Two of the crew, Powers and Sparrows, while tending trawls in a dory, were lost in a fog, thirty miles off Sable Island. The others searched for them for hours in vain. Captain Greer said he heard after docking that a steamer picked up the men, but the report had not been confirmed last night.

COLONEL'S DECISION SHOCK TO MOOSERS

Charge Is Made That Leaders Kept News Back; Belief Is Strong That Party Is Doomed

By HUGH S. MILLER,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 10.—Theodore Roosevelt today notified the Progressive national convention that he could not accept its nomination for President.

Five hours after the selection of Colonel Roosevelt and after Justice Hughes' acceptance had been made public the convention received the following message:

To the Progressive Convention:

I am very grateful for the honor you confer upon me by nominating me as President. I can not accept it at this time. I do not know the attitude of the candidate of the Republican party toward the vital questions of the day.

Therefore, if you desire an immediate decision I must decline the nomination. But, if you prefer it, I suggest that my conditional refusal to run be placed in the hands of the Progressive national committee. If Mr. Hughes' statements, when he makes them, shall satisfy the committee that it is for the interests of the country that he be elected, they can act accordingly and treat my refusal as definitely accepted.

If they are not satisfied they can so notify the Progressive party and at the same time they can confer with me and then determine on whatever action we may severally deem appropriate to meet the needs of the country.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
(Signed.)

Colonel Roosevelt's statement, which was not unexpected by those in his confidence, struck dismay to the hearts of the leaders of the cause and to the rank and file of the delegates to the convention, who had counted on him as their candidate in the coming campaign.

Colonel Roosevelt's intimation that everything depended upon the position Justice Hughes should take, coupled with the later publication of a comprehensive statement given out by the latter in Washington, was everywhere accepted as definite assurance that he will desert the Progressives and support the Republican candidate.

Everywhere also there was a sentiment that the decision announced by Colonel Roosevelt dooms the Progressive party, which polled a tremendous vote four years ago, to oblivion.

The receipt of Colonel Roosevelt's statement made the last few hours of the Progressive convention was an incident more dramatic perhaps than anything that has ever happened in the political history of the country.

NEWS IS WITHHELD.

While hundreds of delegates and thousands of guests were cheering the name of the man who has led them since the creation of the party; while they applauded to the echo the enthusiastic words of Victor Murdock, Colonel John M. Parker, Raymond Robins and others who eloquently urged them to keep the faith, and even while they were going whole-heartedly through the program of nominating Colonel Parker as the running mate of their candidate for the presidency a group of leaders was engaged in talking from Colonel Roosevelt's own lips the words that were to bring the structure,

COLONEL THUNDERS AND THEN LETS UP

Peters Out in the Peroration, Says John Temple Graves; Sees No Chance That He Will Accept

Progressive Party, Says Writer, Will Survive and Fight Bravely; Roosevelt Letter Is Criticised

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

Chicago, June 10.—Such a pity. To have thundered so magnificently in the exordium and to have petered out so pitifully in the peroration.

To have deserted such a body at such a time in such a cause.

How could Mr. Roosevelt have done it?

That he had done it there is not the faintest shadow of doubt. There is not one little ray of hope in his communication to the convention which indicates that he may yet accept the Progressive nomination.

He delays his acceptance until he can hear how far the views of Mr. Justice Hughes go in the spirit of Americanism and Preparedness, and Mr. Justice Hughes, before the ink is dry on the Roosevelt telegram, is already out with a declaration which, whether made or not made for the purpose of satisfying the Roosevelt faction and destroying the Progressive party, will undoubtedly not give to Mr. Roosevelt the excuse to run.

HITS T. R. LETTER.

Upon the question of Americanism and preparedness the Hughes telegram to Chairman Harding seems almost to have been made to fit the Roosevelt objections and to destroy the Roosevelt justification to run. Upon those two questions the nominee of the Republican party has already satisfied the nominee of the Progressive party.

But behind these two vital questions of Americanism and preparedness remain all the splendid issues and ideas of popular government by the people and for the people upon which the Progressive party has been builded and on which it hoped to live and to serve for generations to come.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter is the least creditable document he ever wrote. Scarcely a line of it touches the measure of the gratitude which he ought to feel for such idolatrous devotion, so consistently maintained by so splendid a body of American citizens.

"LEAVES PARTY ALONE"

It carries no allusion to the great popular questions and the vital legislation, beyond Americanism and Preparedness, for which Roosevelt and the Progressives have fought together. So far as Theodore Roosevelt is concerned the issue is settled. I am sorry that it is not settled in the way that Mr. Roosevelt has settled it.

He taught these people to shout "Armageddon." He taught these people to sing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." And today, with the battle at its zenith, and its crisis, he leaves them to shout the shibboleth and sing the song alone.

Mr. Roosevelt had a right in the beginning to decline the nomination of the convention, but he ought to have done it in the beginning and not when it was too late to deliberate over his successor.

He knows and has known for five days the proceedings of this convention. Every pulse, every throb, every burst of enthusiasm and every tear of patriotic devotion has been reported to him. And if he was holding his decision in reserve until he could make up his mind or measure the chances of success, he had no right to gamble with the ballots of this splendid body of American citizens.

Mr. Roosevelt is a Progressive. He

Hughes Hits Wilson; Defines His Position on National Issues

Washington, June 10.—Justice Charles Evans Hughes today resigned from the United States Supreme Court and accepted the Republican nomination for the Presidency. He gave out the following statement:

Hon. Warren G. Harding, chairman National Convention, Chicago:

Mr. Chairman and Delegates—I have not desired the nomination. I have wished to remain on the bench.

But this in critical period of our history I recognize that is your right to summon and my paramount duty to respond. You speak at a time of national exigency, transcending merely partisan consideration. You voice the demand for a dominant, thorough-going Americanism with firm protective up-building policies essential to our peace and security; and to that call in this crisis, I cannot fail to answer with the pledge of all that is in me to the service of our country. Therefore, I accept the nomination.

I stand for the firm and unflinching maintenance of all the rights of American citizens on land and sea. I neither impugn motives nor underestimate difficulties.

But it is more regretfully true that in our foreign relations we have suffered inexcusably from the weak and vacillating course which has been taken in regard to Mexico—a course lamentably wrong with regard to both our rights and our duties.

We interfered without consistency and while seeking to dictate when we were concerned we utterly failed to appreciate and discharge our plain duty to our own citizens.

At the outset of the administration the high responsibilities of our diplomatic intercourse with foreign nations were subordinated to a conception of partisan requirements, and we presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of ineptitude.

The latest efforts have not availed to recover the influence and prestige so unfortunately sacrificed and brave words have been stripped of their force by indecision.

I desire to see our diplomacy restored to its best standards, and to have these advanced; to have no sacrifices of national interests to partisan expediency; to have the first ability of the country always at its command, here and abroad in diplomatic intercourse; to maintain firmly our rights under international law; insisting steadily upon our rights as neutrals, and fully performing our international obligations; and by the clear correctness and justice of our position, and our manifest ability and disposition to sustain

CONVENTION'S THIRD BALLOT LANDSLIDE FOR NEW YORK MAN

Favorite Sons Withdraw as Roll Is Called and Justice Gets 949½ Votes Out of Possible 987; Nomination Is Then Made Unanimous.

Leaders Reject Roosevelt Suggestion of Lodge as Compromise Candidate After Peace Conference Had Agreed Upon Hughes.

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

Chicago, June 10.—Solemnly, and with an air of pathetic resignation the Republican National Convention nominated Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hughes for President, and Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana for Vice-President this afternoon.

Hughes received 949½ votes out of the 986 in the convention on the first ballot of the day and the third of the session.

Roosevelt, who was at the same time being riotously nominated at the Progressive convention, got 18½ votes in the Republican body.

The tide that set in for Hughes was "such a tide as moving seems asleep." It was strong, but silent. It swept away all but four of the minor candidates. These were Lodge with seven votes, du Pont with five, Weeks with three and La-Follette with three.

Root, Cummins, Burton and Fairbanks, all formidable contenders at the outset, faded into oblivion in the final voting.

The settled determination of the wearied delegates to name Hughes today and get the doleful business done was only strengthened by a final appeal from Roosevelt, submitted in a note from the Progressive convention.

LAST PEACE PLEA BY ROOSEVELT.

The colonel, as a last peace offering, suggested the name of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts. North Carolina, alone of all the forty-eight States and three territories, took the offering seriously. That State gave Lodge seven votes of its twenty-one.

Probably never in the history of party government has the naming of a candidate been so perfunctory as was the nomination of Mr. Justice Hughes. The delegates came into the Coliseum sadly, took their seats sadly, and sadly proceeded with the duty which had been assigned to them by their leaders in the early morning conference.

The taking of the ballot and the slow swinging of one State after another into the Hughes column was applauded with the same enthusiasm that marked the applauding of a "plugged" vaudeville actor by a clique in the foyer hired for that purpose.

When the ballot was taken and the result was made known some of the Hughes delegates arose and paraded with deep solemnity about the hall, but though flags were swung and the band played, there were ripples of shouts here and there, and at times the silence was broken only by the shuffle of feet and the buzzing of conversation.

HITCHCOCK SOBER AND SOLEMN.

Frank Hitchcock, who has supplied most of the craft of the campaign for Hughes, moved about among the delegates with sepulchral officiousness, as one who would say:

"Those who wish to view the remains will please pass to the right."

Murray Crane of Massachusetts, whose shrewd brain discovered that Hughes alone was strong enough to prevent the nomination of Roosevelt, looked straight ahead of him and said nothing. But once or twice he winked.

Governor Whitman of New York, the only militant Hughes man on the floor, shot out his jaw in the particular manner he employs to denote triumph. He did not smile. Smoot, long and angular, looked from the platform to Penrose, whose gigantic form towered over the heads of his charges from Pennsylvania. Penrose looked back at Smoot. Neither of them looked as if they were especially pleased with the work of the day.

DEMONSTRATION SOON SUBSIDED.

The Oregon delegates, refreshed by the rain, which is their native element, stood on their chair for a while and tried to yell. But when they heard the echoes of their own voices reverberating from the ceiling rafters they subsided. And soon the sadness of the occasion infected all present, and the sounds died away into a dismal sizzle.

When the delegates began streaming in this morning it became apparent that all the arrangements for the big event had been completed.

The first man from Illinois to show brought word that Sherman, the favorite son of that State, had released his delegates, to go whither they would.

Similar word came from Ohio with regard to Burton. Chairman

Weeks Joins "Favorite Sons" in Withdrawing Candidacies and Giving Liberty to Supporters

Harding, Burton's colleague in the Senate, whispered it to Chauncey Depew when he strode toward the platform. Chauncey took care that it did not remain a secret.

Then in the midst of the disorganized mass of humanity which was tramping the aisles clamoring for a chance to reach seats was seen John H. McGrath, Mr. Roosevelt's abbreviated but athletic secretary. Those "in the know" understood that John's presence meant word from the colonel. There was hurrying to and fro and wild inquiry as to what was going forward.

T. R. OFFERS LODGE.

By the time John got to the platform most of the insiders had heard that the Colonel had offered Lodge as an acceptable substitute for himself as the nominee of the convention.

Smoot and Crane, who had been on the bridge since the beginning of the weary voyage, immediately got into action. There was much looking for Lodge, but Lodge was not to be found. A little while before, however, after Hitchcock had been sent out on scout duty, the chiefs knew that the Lodge suggestion would make no difference.

Lodge is not exactly a man to start anything—particularly a stampede. And thorough search revealed that he was not in the house trying to work up a boom for himself. Then was the imposing Ohio chairman, Senator Harding, given the word to start the gavel hammering and get things under way.

The delegates came instantly to order. They were filled with expectation. Some of them, having heard rumors of all sorts flying around, hoped against hope that a row of some kind might be on.

BREATHLESS SILENCE.

When Senator Smoot, at the request of the chair walked down the bridge and confronted the delegation with a sheet of paper in his hand there was breathless silence.

The New York delegation, directly in front of the speakers' stand, left off in the middle of a shift to Hughes (they were surreptitiously arranging, and listened. Massachusetts, surprised of trying to get behind Lodge and break up the convention, had the guilty look that always embarrassed suspected innocence.

But Smoot really had no shock to impart. He said: "I have a communication to make. He read:

"On behalf of the Republican conference I present for your consideration as their candidate for President, Justice Charles E. Hughes."

There was an interval of applause when this had subsided Senator Smoot observed that in his opinion Mr. Hughes had the character and ability needed in such a candidate and that he was available first because he was supporting the present Governor of New York and the majority of the New York delegation, second because he had already removed by his judicial position from any participation in the frightfulness of 1912 which has sundered that party and made dangerous enemies.

TIME TO GET TOGETHER.

Amid polite silence Smoot continued that with the adoption of a Republican platform on which all parties could stand, he felt that it was a good time to get together.

He then fumbled among the papers in his hand and produced a second. "Here," he said. "is a communication from Colonel oosevelt."

Somebody hearing the magic name set up a screech in the galleries. A cop, schooled in his duties early in the day, suppressed the disturber with a threat of violence.

The Senator proceeded to read the oosevelt communication, which will be found in another column.

The delegates were interested, but not enthusiastic. The crowd in the gallery began searching the Massachusetts delegation for Lodge, evidently expecting that he would rise and bow, but Lodge was not among his brethren.

John McGrath, now perched on a corner of the platform, looked extremely self-conscious. He also looked a trifle disappointed at the obvious fact that his chief's suggestion was not making such a hit.

SO IT WAS ORDERED.

When the buzz of talk following the reading of the letter had died away, Smoot announced that the Roosevelt communication had been laid on the table in the Progressive convention, and suggested the same procedure in the Republican convention. There being no objection, as the writers of minutes says, it was so ordered.

There now fell the sort of a pause which comes in all conventions before what a distinguished editorial writer would call the "big stuff" comes what was going to happen. The big audience was curious and it is no violation of confidence to say that most of the delegates were more curious.

"The chair," said Senator Harding in a very bigger tone than the need of the occasion really demanded, "announces that the next order of business is the taking of a ballot. Before the ballot is proceeded with the chair has great pleasure in introducing Senator Weeks."

All eyes shifted to Senator Weeks, who was observed directly behind the chairman, a large, powerful man with a moustache, a bald head, and the same air of resignation that ly like a pall over the whole place.

CHEERS FOR WEEKS

The cheers broke out, now Weeks' presence meant that the Massachusetts boys were to be set free from the trammels of the primary pledges. It became apparent that somebody would be nominated, and there would soon be a chance to get out into the open air.

"It is quite apparent," said Senator Weeks—a scream of "Louder" here broke from behind him, and he uplifted his voice—"that this convention prefers another than I as its candidate. For reasons which I will not go into, I therefore withdraw, and ask the men who have supported me to follow the dictates of their own consciences.

"As I hope they will join me in doing their utmost for the candidate of this convention." As certain indications of sympathy were heard in various parts of the house, Senator Weeks took a step toward the delegates and cried, "And I want you to know there are no political scars on me." Whereupon there were more cheers and good hearty ones.

YOUNG McCORMICK, TOO.

Hardly had Weeks left the speakers' platform before up popped Congressman Rodenberg of Illinois for the purpose of unleashing the Illinois fifty-eight, who had been voting as a unit for Lawrence Y. Sherman, their senior Senator.

Mr. Rodenberg said that he had been requested to say that Senator Sherman deeply appreciated the loyalty of the Illinois delegates but that he now fully released them to take whatever courses they would in regard to the nomination. The Illinois delegates seemed glad to be free. They stood up on their chairs and yelled for fifteen seconds. Then, among them rose McCormick, who followed Mr. Insanity to the borders of the G. O. P. four years ago, but resolutely refused to go any further.

T. R. said Medill, has and never has had a more devoted friend than the gallery began searching the Massachusetts delegation for Lodge, evidently expecting that he would rise and bow, but Lodge was not among his brethren.

John McGrath, now perched on a corner of the platform, looked extremely self-conscious. He also looked a trifle disappointed at the obvious fact that his chief's suggestion was not making such a hit.

T. R. said Medill, has and never has had a more devoted friend than the Illinois delegation. He was the time for a good man to come to the aid of the party and boost the nominee. In Medill's opinion, formed this morning, the nominee would be Charles E. Hughes, and he bespoke for that gentleman all the energies of the delegates there present.

Then began the roll call and instantly it was apparent that all would soon be over.

Alabama, which had scattered her votes, gave the Illinois statesman to Hughes. Arizona tossed some of hers to Roosevelt, but later withdrew them. California turned her whole twenty-six into the Hughes column.

WITHDRAWS T. R.'s NAME.

Then came Colorado and "Big Steve," otherwise known as Archie Stevenson, who was chauffeur on the steam roller four years, but who this year has been a T. R. boomer, rose ponderously to make an announcement.

With a chair bottom bellied under his 450 pounds, Mr. Stevenson said that he represented all the Roosevelt delegates in the convention, and that it was their unanimous wish that the name of the Colonel be withdrawn.

Arizona, rebuked by this generosity on the part of the vast Colorados, straightway took back her Roosevelt votes and handed them to the Justice.

Delaware, supposed to be solid for Du Pont, wheeled into line with six more. So it went till Illinois was reached. Her votes were delivered to Hughes without a speech or a struggle. Then came two fast honest States, Indiana, which is always for Fairbanks and Iowa, which is always for Cummings. Both of them proved to be solid for Hughes, with delegations of 30 to 26 respectively. These three "I" States are always pivotal in a Presidential campaign, and their unanimity cheered up the delegates to a very noticeable extent.

DID A THOROUGH JOB.

Maryland had one vote, for Roosevelt and delivered it, despite "Big Steve's" withdrawal of the Colonel's name. Massachusetts, emancipated by Weeks, gave him one vote notwithstanding. She gave the Colonel three and turned in the rest, thirty-two in number, to Hughes. Michigan, which came here for Henry Ford, had already switched to Hughes twenty-eight of her thirty votes. Today she made a jeb of it and gave him the other two.

Minnesota thought enough of the Colonel to give him three and a half. Montana gave him seven—one for Dickson—who is back in the Republican party after playing a season as chairman of the Progressives, but who is still strong for his former chief.

The next big State to climb on the ice wagon was New Jersey. Hughes got twenty-seven from her and T. R. one.

NEW YORK JOINS REST.

When New York was called Senator James C. Wadsworth arose and announced that New York's eighty-seven votes were for Hughes. Inasmuch as almost one-half of the New Yorkers believed Elihu Root the only living man fit for the presidency, this involved a mighty sacrifice.

Barnes, who would have been deeply grieved to see his boys going to the Justice stayed away, and shared his own feelings. He is not a delegate but as national committeeman has been present in the convention. Because of some hitch or mistake T. Coleman du Pont got five votes out of South Carolina's seven, the remaining votes going to Hughes.

Utah split 7 to 1 between Hughes and the Colonel and the rest of them, including Hawaii, Alaska, and the far away Philippine Islands scrambled into the refrigerator as fast as the votes could be called.

It was distinctly necessary to hold a "demonstration" when the result was announced. The scene that followed, however, demonstrated only that the Republicans are willing to nominate Mr. Hughes if they have to, but refuse absolutely to become fanatical about him.

John Wanamaker, veteran of many conventions and campaigns and a strong commanding figure nominated Charles Warren Fairbanks for Vice President, speaking for Pennsylvania.

REAL SHOUTING NOW.

Then there was real shouting, for the Republicans like Fairbanks, who is a willing performer in campaigns and a wise counsellor in times of party trouble.

There was no opposition and the nomination was made by acclamation. Great was the rejoicing in Indiana, which had played the shrewdest politics of any of the delegations, her politicians imbibing a taste for that avocation with their milk.

As the tall sycamore's nomination was finally recorded a jealous Ohioan observed, "Indiana never never comes to a national convention without taking something home. Sometimes it's a candidate for President, sometimes it is a Vice-President, sometimes it is only a couple of bath towels and a few cakes of soap from the hotel, but it is always something."

HEED MAIL APPEAL FOR WEST ROXBURY

Congressman George Holden Tinkham has received assurances from the First Assistant Postmaster General at Washington that his appeal to the department to extend mail delivery as petitioned by the West Roxbury Highlands Improvement and the Germantown Citizens' Associations, would receive immediate attention. Postmaster Murray has been called upon to make a careful inquiry.

HUGHES ISSUES HIS STATEMENT

them, to dignify our place among the nations.

I stand for an Americanism which knows no ulterior purpose; for a patriotism which is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we are for the country and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.

I believe in adequate prompt provision to assure absolutely our national security. I believe in preparedness not only entirely adequate for our defense with respect to numbers and equipment in both army and navy, but with all thoroughness to the end that in each branch of the service there may be the utmost efficiency under the most competent administrative heads.

We are devoted to the ideal of honorable peace. We wish to promote all wise and practicable measures for the just settlement of international disputes. In view of our abiding ideals, there is no danger of militarism in this country. We have no policy of aggressiveness but for territory; no zeal for strife.

It is in this spirit we demand adequate provision for national defense and we condemn the inexcusable neglect that has been shown in this matter of first national importance.

We must have a strength which respect demands the strength of an efficient nation ready for every emergency.

Our preparation must be industrial and financial as well as military. Our severest test will come after the war is over. We must make a fair and wise readjustment of the tariff in accordance with sound protective principles to insure our economic independence and to maintain American standards of living. We must conserve the just interests of labor, realising that democracy, patriotism and national strength must be rooted in even-handed justice.

In preventing, as we must, unjust discrimination and monopolistic practices, we must still be zealous to assure the foundations of honest business. Particularly should we seek the expansion of foreign trade. We must not throttle American enterprise, but rather promote it and take pride in honorable achievement.

We must take up the serious problem of transportation, of labor, of finance and foreign commerce, in a sensible and manly manner and provide an enduring basis for prosperity in the time of constitutional powers of Congress so as adequately to protect the public on one hand and on the other the usual prices in spite of market advances and despite the fact that prices elsewhere have been increased. A gas, per thousand feet $0.90 value. $0.75 While they last.

I stand for the principle of our civil service laws. In every department of government the highest efficiency must be insisted upon. For all laws and programs are vain without efficiency and impartial administration.

If candor and frankness of this statement speak upon all the subjects that will arise during my election. I can only say that I fully endorse the platform that you have adopted.

I deeply appreciate the responsibility you impose. I should have been loath to have that responsibility placed upon another. But I shall undertake to meet it, grateful for the confidence you express. I sincerely trust that all former differences may be forgotten and that we may have united effort in a patriotic realization of our national needs and opportunities.

I have resigned my judicial office and I am ready to devote myself unreservedly to the campaign.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES.

Resignation of Hughes Accepted

Washington, June 10.—Secretary to the President Tumulty this afternoon officially announced that President Wilson had accepted the resignation of Associate Justice Hughes, who earlier in the day submitted his resignation that he might accept the Republican nomination for the presidency.

Justice Hughes' resignation was taken to President Wilson while he was in his study at the White House. Secretary Tumulty later returned with the following reply for Justice Hughes:

Dear Mr. Justice Hughes:

I am in receipt of your letter of resignation and feel constrained to yield to your desire. I, therefore, accept your resignation as Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to take effect as of today. Sincerely yours, (Signed) WOODROW WILSON.

The letter was immediately sent from the executive offices of the White House to Justice Hughes' residence by special messenger and was there delivered personally to Justice Hughes. He received it without comment.

SEEDS OF PARTY ROW SOWN ON LAST DAY AMONG DELEGATES FROM THE BAY STATE

WEEKS BITTER AT GOVERNOR, LODGE, CRANE

By JOHN T. LAMBERT,
Political Editor of the Boston American

Chicago, Ills., June 10.—The Kilkenny Cats, otherwise known as the Massachusetts Republican delegation, will start for home tomorrow.

They will carry with them, for the edification of their supporters, one of the most serious internal fights that ever distressed the Bay State G. O. P.

The situation is about like this:

WEEKS is sore because Lodge quit him for Roosevelt.

He is vexed at Crane because Uncle Murray delivered the delegates to Hughes.

He is angry at McCall because the Governor refused at all times to indorse his candidacy, and voted against him on all three ballots.

LODGE is sore because Crane threw the delegation to Hughes after Roosevelt, himself, had put Lodge in nomination.

He is angry at McCall because the Governor voted against him.

He is vexed at Weeks because the junior Senator practically asked the delegates to vote for him.

CRANE is peeved at Lodge because he knows the latter was "playing the game" with T. R., when Murray expected Lodge would be with Hughes.

M'CALL is mad at Weeks because he feels that Weeks deprived Massachusetts of an opportunity to give the country the next President of the United States.

The internal dissension that has split the Massachusetts Republican party is no small sensation of the Republican national convention.

The delegates cheered Weeks today when he made the speech of withdrawal, but a gentleman from Michigan hollered, so he was heard throughout the Coliseum: "You are strong for Weeks today, boys, but you didn't like him so well yesterday, when he was a candidate."

Weeks still believes that if the Massachusetts delegation had come into Chicago united behind him he would have won the nomination.

Lodge believes that if "Uncle Murray" hadn't forced the Hughes vote yesterday afternoon, he, himself, would today be the Republican nominee.

FEELING IS BITTER.

Weeks told me this evening that he will support and will campaign for Hughes, but Crane will watch him most of the time.

The feeling between Weeks and McCall is so embittered that the Weeks crowd will put Congressman "Sam" Winslow, the happy undertaker from Worcester, into the field against McCall for Governor this Fall if "Sam" will stand for it.

Most of the delegates will start for home on the train tomorrow, but none of them won't speak to each other. If they do it will be for appearance sake only.

William F. Garcelon of Newton, who was one of the Weeks campaign managers, gave vent to his feeling today when he said: "Henry Cabot Lodge can have no pleasant recollection of this convention."

"Did you notice that tremendous ovation Lodge got at the convention?" said Garcelon, in a tone of sarcasm.

As a matter of record, Lodge got but seven votes out of the 887 delegates, despite the fact that his candidacy was recommended by Mr. Roosevelt. He received not a single vote from Massachusetts. The four Roosevelt pledged delegates would not allow their own leader to take them to Lodge.

SENTIMENT LACKING.

When the name of "Massachusetts" was read for a declaration of the Bay State vote, Governor McCall arose and said:

"Massachusetts would be glad to vote for its senior Senator, but there is no indication of such sentiment among the people of Massachusetts."

Weeks, 1; Roosevelt, 3; Hughes, 32.

Mr. Crane had delivered all those except one who had voted for Weeks on the two preceding ballots.

After the Roosevelt indorsement of Lodge had been read to the convention Mr. Weeks was allowed to "make a statement."

From the platform he spoke to the convention:

"I withdraw as a candidate. It is evident that the convention prefers another. I bear no political scars on my body. I thank those who have voted for me, and ask them to follow only the dictates of their own judgement."

It may be seen that this was not a Lodge speech.

Weeks was nominated by Lodge but he also feels that Lodge did not make a "Weeks" speech.

SUSPICIOUS OF LODGE.

Mr. Lodge's nominating speech was the shortest of the convention. He was done in nine minutes. Weeks' friends say that Lodge made absolutely no effort to stimulate enthusiasm for Weeks.

That is one of the reasons they refused to vote for Lodge this morning. Mr. Crane is the other reason.

Lodge voted for Roosevelt on the second ballot. The delegates believe he was "playing with Teddy" at a time when he was nominating Weeks for the presidency.

Governor McCall evidently was satisfied with the outcome. He was one of the four Massachusetts delegates to vote for Hughes on the first ballot. Chairman "Ned" Thurston of the Republican State committee, who was doing most of the "leg work" for Weeks, thought it would be nice to find out how the Governor voted, so when the second ballot came in he asked the Governor to request a public poll of the delegates.

"I will be glad to comply with that request," said the Governor, and he again voted for Hughes.

HANN WANTED M'CALL.

Governor McCall had received country-wide requests for him to enter the presidential field. When he declined to become a positive candidate, he was besieged to allow the use of his name as a compromise in the event that the convention was deadlocked.

He had practically agreed to that request.

If it were not for the fact that Weeks had started his corporation-propelled candidacy the Governor doubtless would have entered the field.

It is said that twenty Congressmen and former Congressmen who were members of the convention personally requested him to enter the lists. One of them was a Congressman who made a seconding speech for Weeks.

Governor McCall was provoked by the methods employed by the Weeks people in this campaign, particularly at home where the delegates told the voters they were "unpledged."

Before he arrived, Treasurer Louis A. Coolidge, of the United Shoe Machinery Company had threatened to defeat him for re-election this Fall. Coolidge also declared he would drive Murray Crane out of Massachusetts back to New York, "where he belongs," and that he would seal the fate of Henry Cabot Lodge in politics.

From all this it may be seen that the Massachusetts party is not unlike the crowd at a Donnybrook fair. They are all looking to crack the first head that appears above the surface.

Mr. Lodge probably knew that Roosevelt was going to recommend him for the presidency. He was absent from the convention for the first time when Roosevelt's message was read.

But he was handy, in case the lightning should strike. He entered shortly and advanced to the platform to support a motion that the Hughes nomination be made unanimous.

This time the convention was more enthusiastic for Mr. Lodge. He could not be nominated then.

GOT LITTLE APPLAUSE.

There was little or no applause when Lodge's name was read in the message. None of it came from the Massachusetts delegation. But Weeks only beat Lodge by one cheer when he was nominated. That one came from "Ned" Thurston. Mr. Thurston cast the only vote for Weeks after the junior Senator had withdrawn.

Weeks, himself, threw the first bucketful of cold water on his senatorial colleague. He was the first person in the convention to speak after Lodge's name was read in the Roosevelt message.

"Harmony" was supposed to be the guideline of this convention.

Massachusetts was always the first in war anyway.

PREDICTS VICTORY.

Politicians out here are issuing statements. Charles Stanley Baxter of Medford and Boston issued one. It evidently is not intended to please Weeks. Baxter predicts victory for Hughes in Massachusetts and then throws in these significant lines:

"His nomination was brought about because there was a strong sentiment among the leading Republicans in every State in the Union that he was the one big outstanding man who could unite all elements of the party. Brass bands, elaborate headquarters, ribbons and literature counted as nothing against the sober thinking of the vast majority of the delegates."

Harding Informs Hughes of Result

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 10.—Immediately after the official announcement was made that Justice Hughes had been nominated, Chairman Warren G. Harding sent him the following telegram:

Chicago, June 10, 1916.

Hon Charles E. Hughes,
Washington, D. C.

With deliberation and enthusiasm under circumstances which could not have more complimentary and with unanimity never excelled in past conventions you have been nominated by the Republicans of the nation as our candidate for President of the United States.

Your eminent fitness for this high office, your sterling integrity and unsullied private character are understood and appreciated by our countrymen. Voicing the sentiment of the convention over which I have presided by the courtesy of my fellow delegates I congratulate you and the country upon the outcome of this convention.

WARREN G. HARDING.

Root's Friends to Work for Hughes

Cotteaux, Chicago, June 10.—Because of a report that was fathered by certain Progressives that the Root followers were "sore" because Hughes had been nominated, John W. Dwight, chairman of the Root campaign committee, issued a statement pledging the Root men to Hughes. He said:

"Justice Hughes is the choice of a most representative convention which has followed the wishes of the people after a full, free, fair and open contest.

"The friends of Senator Root will give Hughes their most cordial and enthusiastic support. The country is to be congratulated that we have a candidate who will give us a virile and vigorous foreign policy and an administration based upon integrity and high ideals. Justice Hughes is a man who will insist upon these ideals being carried out in the fullest measure.

"I am sure Hughes will unite all elements in the party. He stands for united and aggressive Republicanism. Senator Root's friends will be foremost in exerting themselves to secure this election."

MRS. HUGHES AND THE QUIET HOME LIFE OF REPUBLICAN PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE

WIFE IS GENUINE HELPMATE; WELL VERSED IN LEGAL LORE

"What Every Woman Knows," Barrie wrote, was something to the effect that back of every man, as inspiration, and often as the very source of the words he speaks, there is a woman.

Back of Charles Evans Hughes, Republican nominee for President, there is a woman, whose peculiar abilities have furnished him the staunchest backing and the keenest assistance throughout his career.

Mrs. Hughes, in the first place, has refused to allow her views on public matters to become items of comment; she has maintained silence on such points.

But Mrs. Hughes comes of a legal family; she herself is skilled in the law's ways of thought; and in her husband's legal career she has been more than once of great assistance.

Mrs. Hughes' personality has long been a matter of absorbing interest, inasmuch as she has been considered one of the possible First Ladies of the Land.

At the time of her husband's appointment to the Supreme Court, Justice and Mrs. Hughes spent some anxious days in Washington looking for a home.

Mrs. Hughes went to work systematically and tirelessly and found a home in the west section of Massachusetts avenue extension near Twenty-fourth street and surrounded by handsome new residences.

OF CONSERVATIVE TYPE

Mrs. Hughes belongs to the conservative type, and she is not liable to strike out new paths. Her social career has never caused the least anxiety. She is a woman of many resources and one to whom her home duties appeal most powerfully.

About the usual questions of the day, suffrage, higher education for women, women in public life and all kindred themes, Mrs. Hughes declines to be brought into discussion.

But that she has very well defined opinions and can express them tersely and appealingly is well known in New York and Albany and wherever she has resided. That she believes in the highest intellectual development for women as well as for men she frankly admits. She is herself a graduate of Wellesley and of Wells College, New York, at the latter place, one of her old-time associates being Frances Folsom, afterwards Mrs. Grover Cleveland.

The romance which culminated in the marriage of Justice and Mrs. Hughes was one of those which figure frequently in the lives of successful public men. As a young man, the former Governor of New York was a clerk in the law office of her father, Walter S. Carter of New York City. He was then reading law and had given promise of the sterling worth and talent which has distinguished his career.

GENUINE HELPMATE

The attachment between the young people had matured more rapidly than Mr. Carter approved and he insisted that his young assistant should attain some definite legal success before the marriage was celebrated.

This was not long in coming and Mr. Hughes became and continued for many years the junior partner in the well-known law firm of Carter and Hughes.

Beginning life rather modestly and relying on their own efforts for advancement in the world, Mrs. Hughes developed into a genuine helpmate to her husband and one of the strong factors in his prosperous career.

She never attended a law college, nor even seriously took up lectures on the subject. But the daughter of an excellent jurist, she has been accustomed to hearing legal problems discussed all her life.

After her marriage, she took the most intelligent interest in her husband's affairs, and could discuss his business and advise him on the most delicate questions. She is an admirable business woman, and can look after the vexatious details belonging to the management of a home with great skill and without adding their care to her husband's burden.

Her devotion to her husband's interest and her critical sympathy with his ideals are among her strongest characteristics and most charming qualities.

FOND OF MUSIC.

Books, music, paintings and rare old engravings are Mrs. Hughes' fads. Her home is filled with excellent pictures, picked up mostly abroad and framed and hung with care. Before public life absorbed his time so completely Mr. Hughes with his wife spent almost every vacation traveling abroad. Now they go to the Adirondacks in the Summer.

During the somewhat nomadic life they have led across Justice Hughes became prominently identified with the public service. Mrs. Hughes has faithfully packed all her treasures and brought them into each new home.

Justice and Mrs. Hughes are music lovers. Mrs. Hughes has kept abreast of all that is good in music and her salon is stocked with musical instruments and with the finest selections of the masters.

Fairbanks Elected on 1904 Ticket

Charles Warren Fairbanks, former Vice President of the United States and now again nominated for that office, is a native of Ohio but came to Indianapolis in 1874, shortly after his marriage to Miss Cornelia Cole, daughter of Judge C. B. Cole, of Marysville, Ohio.

Mr. Fairbanks was born on a farm near Unionville Centre, Union county, Ohio, in May 1852, being a son of Loredon M. and Mary A. (Smith) Fairbanks, natives respectively of Vermont and New York State, but who emigrated to Ohio in the thirties.

The father of Charles W. Fairbanks was a wagonmaker by trade but later took to farming. Youth and early manhood were passed by the future Vice-President in assisting with the work on the farm and attending the district school. Later he entered the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, which graduated him in 1872.

In 1892 he was induced to accept the chairmanship of the Republican State convention, and he delivered an address which was published as "the campaign keynote." In 1895 he was made the unanimous choice of the Republicans for United States Senator He was a stanch supporter of William McKinley, and their friendship continued until Mr. Kinley's death.

At the eleventh Republican national convention at St. Louis in June, 1896, Mr. Fairbanks was made chairman of the Committee on Resolutions and read the platform.

In 1904 Mr. Fairbanks was elected to the Vice-Presidency. In 1908 he was presented by his friends for the Republican Presidential nomination, and, although defeated, he was the only candidate who had behind him the solid support of his own State, besides which he received votes from a larger number of States than any other candidate except the nominee of the convention.

Upon retirement from the Vice-Presidency in 1909 Mr. Fairbanks, accompanied by his wife, made a tour of the world.

Since 1910 Mr. Fairbanks has quietly pursued his occupation as a lawyer and interested himself in many organizations of charitable character. He is a trustee of the Methodist Hospital, a member of the Masonic fraternities and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine.

Five children—one daughter, who died several years ago, and four sons—were born to Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Fairbanks. The latter, who died several years ago, was president of the Daughters of the American Revolution from 1901 to 1905 and was an influential factor in the affairs of the National Federation of Womens Clubs and other organizations.

HUGHES THE MAN; HIS LIKES AND DISLIKES AS SHOWN BY ACTS

The anecdotes which have gathered about the name of Charles Evans Hughes deals almost exclusively with his public life, for his private life has ever been subordinated. But one of the earliest, distinctly characteristic of the man, dates from his fifth year.

He rebelled then against the methods of the Oswego, New York, Primary School, where he began to study.

"The teacher goes over the same things so many times," he told his father, and at the same time presented an outline of his own desires under the heading

"Charles Hughes' plan of study."

The outline called for study under his mother's tutelage, and it was adopted. The boy began his studies with his mother as teacher.

Hughes first came into prominence when he was retained by the Stevens Committee, in the New York City investigation.

The committee applauded Mr. Hughes and offered him the post of counsel. He refused, however, as he told his friends, he did not believe they were sincere. But when they gave him a free hand, he took the job. Since then, he has been a national figure.

The insurance investigation followed and Mr. Hughes' ability to untangle the tangled books of the insurance companies astounded the public.

"He is a wizard," the newspapers exclaimed.

"There is no wizardry about it," said Hughes. "It is work."

CAN'T BE BOSSED

They offered him the Republican nomination for Mayor. He refused because he was busy with the insurance cases; but that Fall, backed by the support of President Roosevelt, he was nominated for Governor.

"How do we know he's a faithful party man?" the bosses wanted to know. They got their answer in Hughes' telegram of acceptance.

"I shall accept—without pledge," said Hughes. "To give the State an administration free from taint of bossism."

In the campaign, even his enemies voted for him; just as in the National Convention the Old Guard took him against their will. A tall, spare man who had lost heavily through the insurance investigations was asked who would receive his vote for Governor.

"Hughes, damn him!" he replied.

Hughes' appointments as Governor found no favor. A New York politician asked: "Do you suppose if the voters had known this list of appointments in advance, they would have elected Hughes?" he asked, and answered his own question: "Not in a million years."

But in the next election, Hughes did win again.

The legislature at Albany rebelled against him. He appealed to the people to support his measures. The people responded with a flood of telegrams and letters.

"How are they getting along at Albany?" a lobbyist was asked.

"They are eating out of his hand," the lobbyist admitted.

He forced through the Public Utilities Bill.

"He's a foe of the corporations," everyone said.

Then he vetoed the bill ordering the railroads to charge only two-cent fare. "Those who had branded him as a corporation tool for very flabbergasted.

LIKES TO TRAMP.

Mr. Hughes has one sovereign remedy when he finds himself run down from overwork.

He takes a tramping tour.

He used to go to Switzerland for those jaunts. Now he goes to the Adirondacks, or to Maine, and walks and canoes and fishes.

Work stimulates him to efforts that jeopardize his health.

"He goes at a new piece of work like a hungry man at a meal," said a friend.

The politicians could not understand this insistence of doing what he considered just and right, without regard to policy.

His hardest blow at the faithful in Albany came early in his administration as Governor.

He moved his desk into the public office, shut up the "back stairs," and did all his business in the open.

"Things are in a bad way at Albany," the Republican State chairman said when he encountered this new regime.

Mr. Hughes' taste in books is

HUGHES NAMED FOR SUPREME COURT BENCH SIX YEARS AGO

The following story of the life and the work of Charles Evans Hughes Republican nominee for President, has been prepared for the Sunday AMERICAN:

An iron will, incorruptible character and remarkable reasoning ability are characteristics commonly attributed him.

Mr. Hughes was born at Glen Falls, N. Y., April 11, 1862, the son of a Welshman, who had come to this country in 1855 and became a teacher of languages and afterwards a Baptist clergyman.

As the slow methods of the ordinary school irked the brilliant boy, his mother took charge of his education until he was ten years old. Then he entered a New York City grammar school, and at the age of fourteen began his studies in Madison (now Colgate) University, at Hamilton, N. Y. Two years later he entered the sophomore class at Brown University, where he was graduated with many honors in 1881.

ENTERS LAW FIRM.

His parents intended him for the ministry, but the young man had a strong penchant for the law. He secured a position at Delaware Academy, Delhi, N. Y., as instructor in Greek, Latin and Mathematics and at the same time read Blackstone every afternoon in the office of a local judge.

In 1882 he entered Columbia Law School, New York City. He was graduated two years later at the head of his class and became a member of the New York bar.

For the first three years he practised he served as prize tutor at Columbia also, and added to his income further by conducting a private "quiz" two nights every week for law students who desired his aid.

In 1885, he entered the law firm of Carter, Hughes and Cravath and about the same time married Miss Antoinette Carter, daughter of Walter S. Carter, senior member of the firm.

LIFE INSURANCE INQUIRY.

In 1891 Mr. Hughes took a professorship at Cornell University, which he held for two years. He did this partly to recover his health, damaged by over-work. He then entered New York City law practice again.

He first attracted newspaper attention in 1905, when he became counsel for the Stephens gas investigating committee. Mr. Hughes uncovered the ramifications of the gas and electric light monopoly of the metropolis and later assisted in framing bills to bring relief.

In the same year began the famous life insurance investigation, beginning in a quarrel among the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Company and extending to several other large companies.

When asked to take up the work of counsel to the investigating committee Mr. Hughes declined, except on condition that he be given free rein and allowed to handle the probe thoroughly. This condition was granted and he accepted. The investigation lasted four months and resulted in a revolution in insurance methods. Mr. Hughes recommended important legislation which has since corrected existing evils.

During the investigation Mr. Hughes was offered the Republican nomination for Mayor of New York, but refused, desiring to continue his probe.

ON SUPREME BENCH.

In the Autumn of 1906 Mr. Hughes was elected Governor of New York State by the Republicans. Here he took the leadership in radical legislation. He was very successful in getting what he wanted from a hostile Legislature. Whenever he found difficulties thrown in his way he went out and talked to the people and he usually soon found the Legislature yielding. He was elected for a second term of two years in 1908.

Some of the fruits of the Hughes administrations were the public utilities bill, a new insurance code, reorganization of the banking system, regulation of "lobbyists," an employers' liability law, suppression of race track gambling, the eight cent gas bill, and a graduated inheritance tax.

In 1910, President Taft appointed Mr. Hughes an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and he took office on October 1 of that year. Since then his services, though notable, have not been of a spectacular nature. He have been involved in the proceedings of the court as a whole, but it is difficult to tell just what part Mr. Hughes has played.

OUT-OF-DOORS MAN.

Two terms of Mr. Hughes have attracted much attention. In 1907 he said: "Human society cannot be stable unless it is progressive," and the next year: "The common welfare must be the supreme law."

Mr. Hughes is devout, but broad in his religious views. He helped John D. Rockfeller, Jr., organize his famous Sunday school.

He is a "out-of-doors man" and likes to spend his Summers in the Alps or the Adirondacks. His children are Charles E., Jr. now a lawyer in New York City, Helen and Catharine.

CANDIDATE HAS HARD TASK TO DEFEAT WILSON

"Noise Like a Wake in Deaf and Dumb Asylum" When G. O. P. Named Its Ticket, Says "Tad"

By A. BRISBANE.

Convention Hall, Chicago, June 10.—Twenty minutes past eleven and the convention, called for ten, has done nothing. Some of the gentlemen stayed up late.

This is the alleged news at this hour. Roosevelt is to be nominated by the Progressives this morning—only rumor.

Roosevelt has wired from Oyster Bay that he will compromise on Lodge and support him if the convention will nominate him—also rumor.

W. J. Bryan interrupts an excellent discourse on prohibition to tell the story of the Southern soldier who gave $2, all he had, to the legless, armless Yankee cripple.

"The Yankee cripple said: 'It is most kind and generous of you to give your last $2 to a poor Yankee who has lost both legs and both arms.'

"'It isn't that,' said the Southerner, 'you're the first Yankee I have ever seen cut up to suit me.'"

Bryan says: "The Republican party is cut up to suit me."

The same old crowd is here expecting Hughes' nomination and taking it for granted.

A long delay in the beginning makes some of the old politicians believe that something in the way of a changed program has been arranged.

Nobody really wants Hughes among these politicians—except for a belief that he would support Lodge, a typical, practical man, if nominated. It is difficult to change the vote suddenly this morning and make it Lodge instead of Hughes.

The politicians who don't want Hughes would not find it difficult to persuade themselves.

Elimination of Roosevelt and the third ticket would more than make up for giving the Republicans Lodge instead of a strong candidate.

The first of the ballots ought to tell the change in plan if there is any.

If Lodge should be nominated Wilson would be justified in the belief that all the lucky stars have left their courses to come down and work for him.

Nothing is happening just now. You might enjoy a short interview on prohibition with W. J. Bryan. He says that he would not accept the Prohibition nomination—and that is too bad, for it would be very entertaining to observe the speculation in Mr. Wilson's eyes if Bryan were running on a Prohibition "Votes for Women" ticket. Then, old Millennium question, "How can we knock Bryan into a cocked hat?" would come up again.

But Bryan says he will not accept the Prohibition nomination. "My work is in the Democratic party and I am going to work for prohibition in that party."

He was told that the prohibition would mean whiskey instead of something less harmful. But that did not interest him.

His friend, Harvey Ingham of Des Moines, Iowa, where prohibition rules, had just told this writer that Des Moines at this time is drinking more whiskey than it did before the prohibition days. But that does not seem an argument to Mr. Bryan. He says absolute prohibition will come on that statement he is an enthusiastic as he is sincere and mistaken. There is no doubt about his enthusiasm, and he is different from some other prohibitionists in that he practices what he preaches.

But with all kindness and good will he it and there is a warning for him in the ancient Depew and Cannon, both past eighty, and at that age strong enough to talk to twelve thousand people. They have not lived on water or grape juice, nor did Gladstone or Pope Leo or Bismarck, or Jefferson or Washington or Lincoln.

Mr. Bryan's prohibition belief is interesting and important, for it may possibly lead to putting this country for a while on a whiskey basis.

Bryan was told by a friend that he had spent four years at school in France, never saw anybody drink water regularly, never anybody drunk.

He saw a great many people drinking water and a collection of young men home from college ALL DRUNK when he went to visit in Topeka, the prohibition Kansas. Mr. Bryan did not consider that an argument.

And he saw no argument against prohibition in the fact that there are no water drinkers, no prohibitionists, no drunkards, AND NO LACK OF EFFICIENCY in the French and German armies, one drinking light wine and the other light beer, but neither drinking whiskey. When this campaign is over, Mr. Bryan will probably have time on his hands and make a vigorous, picturesque prohibition campaign.

This is interesting to those who know that you cannot change the nature of human beings in a month or eliminate with a speech or a revival the fixed habits of a hundred thousand years.

Excuse the prohibition interview. Nothing is happening. They haven't even prayed for the convention yet, and something must be written for evening newspapers going to press every few minutes.

Ten minutes to twelve and the convention is just coming to order. Harding is hanging with the gavel and Champ Clark's brilliant young daughter, Mrs. Thomson of New Orleans, is marching in with Neil Brinkley.

The audience is requested to rise while prayer is offered by a rabbi.

This convention has now been prayed for by two Protestants, one a bishop, by a Catholic priest, and is prayed for by a Jewish rabbi. The cynics here say that the Republican party will need all these prayers and more.

A newspaperman usually well informed and not given to carrying false rumors as a bumble bee carries pollen, says he knows positively that Roosevelt has communicated with this convention and the Progressive convention, asking both to nominate Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and get his support.

Smoot of Utah, speaking for the harmony committee sent to talk to the Progressives, reads another report and at this moment is praising Hughes.

The committee, made up of Nicholas Murray Butler, Crane, Johnson, Smoot and others, sign the recommendation that Hughes be nominated.

Now comes something from the other side of the fence. The Progressives have sent in a message, which Smoot is reading.

It is a colorless report signed by various names, including that of "Bonaparte," which sounds interesting, among the Smoots and Borahs and Lodges.

But here comes something that ought to be worth while. It is another message, and will contain the message from Theodore Roosevelt. Roosevelt's name passes without a sound, for the crowd is intensely excited and waiting for the name of the man who has been selected to take the nomination away from Hughes.

It is quite a long letter in which Mr. Roosevelt picks out another man for the job that he himself longs for.

As nobody here saw Socrates swallow the hemlock, nobody has any idea of how Roosevelt felt when he wrote the letter that is being read.

The question is, and is important to the Republican party, "Will this convention take Roosevelt's suggestion and drop Hughes in exchange for harmony?"

Here comes the name.

SENATOR LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

The delegates are cheering, but only a small percentage. Perhaps they mean to stick to Hughes, after all. For they plainly say that they think Roosevelt is bluffing. He will not run independently in any case.

The cheering stops and Smoot goes on reading Roosevelt's praise of Lodge. Reads Roosevelt's message which will be published in another column. It is important news.

It interests Mr. Bryan who listens closely. He, too, knows what it is to take a job from one man and hand it to another.

What Roosevelt is now trying to do in favor of Lodge and against Hughes Bryan did four years ago in favor of Wilson and against Champ Clark.

We said only those that saw Socrates swallow the hemlock could describe Roosevelt's feelings as he nominates Lodge. But to that there is one exception. Mr. Bryan knows exactly how Mr. Roosevelt felt when he wrote the letter that is being read.

If Julius Caesar were here he also would know, for he is the gentleman who pushed away the crown.

The reading of the letter is finished, and delegates cheer the name of Theodore Roosevelt sincerely who would not have done it yesterday. We learn that in the Bull Moose convention Roosevelt's letter was "laid on the table," which means rejected, and now the balloting for President will begin. But first Weeks of Massachusetts will speak in favor of Lodge. He stands on the platform and listens to friendly cheers.

He might please the audience if he should begin with a line invented by B. L. T.: "If you have T R's to shed prepare to shed them now."

Senator Weeks is a very big man, with sense enough to make a very short speech. He weighs about 250 pounds. And the little fringe of hair left just round the back of his ears is jet black. He knows that he is bald because he wore tight hats, not because he lived foolishly. A great deal of money has been spent on the Weeks' boom, at least $250,000, it is said by admirers of Weeks. He is entitled, on a pure business basis, to the friendly cheers that welcomed and dismissed him.

Now listen to McCormick. He changed this year from a Bull Moose to a Republican. Everybody imagines that he is going to ask the convention to take the advice of his great Moose leader of yesterday.

But not at all. McCormick asks the convention to vote for Hughes. We shall ask them to make a picture of the Russian mother throwing her weakling twins to the wolves. McCormick will be the Russian mother. The twins will be Roosevelt and Lodge.

Now comes the third ballot, and we shall see whether the Republicans will follow McCormick's advice and throw overboard Roosevelt and his advice for good and all.

Yes, the first States declare for Hughes. Apparently the Moose call from Oyster Bay is to fall on deaf, hard-headed ears. Of course ears have no hearts (but this is written in a hurry and while the proceedings proceed).

Apparently Mr. Wilson is not to have the pleasure of defeating that very neatly dressed example of culture, Henry Cabot Lodge. Illinois has just added her fifty-eight votes to Hughes' collection. Now Willis of Ohio is going to withdraw Burton's name. It's all over. Indiana announces that she withdraws Fairbanks and gives her votes to Hughes. The convention will nominate Hughes on this ballot, then make it unanimous, and the question is "can Hughes win?" Ohio's vote has just gone to Hughes.

The nomination of Hughes is settled. Now the question is, "What will Colonel Roosevelt do about this slap in the face?"

It seems certain that the Progressives will nominate him. Will he run independent? Bryan, in a prohibition campaign, will be live, as Bryan lives on the hope that the glacial period in his party will be over some day. Tad should make a small picture of the glacial period in politics, Hughes and Wilson as the principal glaciers, Roosevelt and Bryan wandering hand in hand; caption "The Babes in the Glaciers."

Massachusetts voted one for Weeks, three for Roosevelt, thirty-two for Hughes. The three for Roosevelt probably represented Lodge's gratitude for the political favors handed to him unselfishly by Colonel Roosevelt.

The news comes now that Roosevelt has been nominated by the Progressives by a unanimous vote.

These politicians think that he will not run. That he has not the political courage to run a ridiculously small vote. But others feel that all the talk about deeds and words could scarcely be swallowed all at one mouthful.

The balloting is done and Hughes is nominated, by an out of a possible 987, or thereabouts. The delegates are standing, the galleries are absolutely cold, and the band is playing the "Star Spangled Banner." Bryan has had better applause than this at small Chautauquas.

You will hear many comments on this convention, none more concise or purely "Taftian" than Ted's sentence, "This is like a wake in a deaf and dumb asylum. I am sorry I came out."

The Chicago Tribune says the Democratic campaign will be built on two sickening phrases, which are, "Thank God for Wilson," and "He kept us out of war."

Our young friends, Patterson and McCormick, forged a war cry that will be not at all sickening and far more valuable to Wilson, namely, "Wages are Higher in the United States than they have ever been and everybody has a job."

There is a high wall for Mr. Hughes to climb. He will have to work hard to climb it. The Mayor nominates delegates to a fireworks display. And so it ends.

It is interesting to observe that this organization which did its best to start a demonstration for every impossible candidate, and on every possible occasion, did not even attempt a demonstration upon the nomination of Hughes. A few delegates cheered a little. The gallery cheered not at all. The band is playing to entertain the people, and they are sitting in their seats, not because they are interested, but because they want to keep the seats that were hard to get.

In spite of his cold reception, Hughes is the strongest man that the Republicans could have selected. Roosevelt's hostility to him and desire for excitement may lead him to run independently. If so, Roosevelt will assume the responsibility for four years more of Wilson. It is quite probable, however, that even if Roosevelt does run his vote will be small. The public soon tires of a "Me or nobody" policy. Roosevelt may decide that Hughes will lose anyhow, and decide to leave to Hughes the responsibility for another Wilson term.

The official vote has been read. Roosevelt got 1,165 votes, Hughes 949½. De Pont got five votes; his friends stayed by him. Three men, to their credit, voted for La Follette.

Mr. Lodge's extreme culture, backed by Roosevelt's advice, secured seven votes. Weeks got three; one vote was missing.

Now Mr. Lodge is speaking. Some of the gaiety that lighted up his face when he permetrated the good joke on the women of the country seems to have left him.

In the United States Treasury they show a gold lump of gold, five hundred pounds and say "You can have it, pick it up and take it away," and the trouble is you cannot pick it up.

Just such a nice brick of gold Roosevelt offered to Lodge, but again the trouble was Lodge couldn't pick it up and carry it away.

Now Hughes, at Senator Lodge's suggestion, is made the unanimous choice of the convention. With a roar of "Ayes" the chairman says: "There are no nays, the ayes have it."

The thing is over and Hughes is officially the Republican candidate.

P. S.—Everybody forgot something —THEY HAVE GOT TO NAME A VICE PRESIDENT. Probably it will be Fairbanks. If it is, Tad will show you a picture of Hughes running the automobile, Fairbanks sitting behind with a glad smile, saying to Little Willie Taft, sitting on the ground "Good-bye Bill, I got another ride."

Now John Wanamaker is recognized, and will make the first Vice-Presidential nomination. More than fifty years at the head of great enterprises, Wanamaker has no difficulty in making himself heard in the big hall. He nominates Fairbanks.

A gentleman from Nebraska is now making "a regular speech" about the vice-presidency.

To this crowd and to the United States in general, the vice-presidency does not mean much. But it means a great deal to some beating hearts in and around this hall.

Almost as much wire pulling and striving has been done for the vice-presidency as the presidency itself.

The man from Nebraska wants the convention to nominate for vice-president a man west of the Mississippi. It probably will not do it.

The banners stretched across the streets and the words echoing in your ears during this campaign will be WILSON AND MARSHALL on one banner, HUGHES AND FAIRBANKS on the other.

The man from Nebraska has nominated a Nebraskan, who rises above the surface and sinks below again.

A man from Ohio is now going to throw Ohio's favorite son overboard and second the nomination of Fairbanks. This probably makes it certain that the Republican ticket will be Hughes and Fairbanks.

In this quartet of candidates, poor Mr. Marshall of Indiana will have to supply all the fuel, youth and enthusiasm.

Messrs. Wilson and Hughes are the ten commandments alive and walking around.

Fairbanks is a tall signpost of the highroad of morality. He is so pure that he has never really recovered from the accusation of drinking one cocktail.

He told the public that it was a cocktail with alcohol in it, anyhow, and besides he was only trying to dredge up the cherry from the bottom of it. You could not ask anything more conscientious than that.

The vice presidential solemnity proceeds drearily.

HOW TO BEAT WILSON AND ARTIFICIAL WAR PROSPERITY IS THE PROBLEM.

Herbert Kaufman

the Great Writer on Public Welfare and Business Efficiency Says:

"Only an Honest Product Dares to Bear a Name in the Open"

HERBERT KAUFMAN is right, and nothing so well proves the honest purity and quality of WARD'S BREAD as the advertisements we are publishing in the Boston newspapers telling of its wholesomeness and the health-sustaining materials used in the making.

Every ingredient used in WARD'S BREAD has been tested in the white light of publicity, as well as in the laboratories of the country. The result has proved WARD'S BREAD a pure food—a nutritious food—a healthful food.

The water with which WARD'S BREAD is made is filtered to remove the organic matter found in all city water. Then to the water is added in small and proper quantities Arkady Yeast Food (U. S. Registered Trade Mark issued May 9th, 1916), a preparation approved and protected by United States patents, and it is the addition of this great discovery which makes WARD'S BREAD so distinctive in taste and so beneficial from a health standpoint.

Here is the proof! City water varies in different localities. In some places it is hard—in others soft—according to the amount of mineral salt. This condition makes a decided difference in bread. Arkady Yeast Food is a compound of mineral salts, chiefly lime salts, such as are commonly found in natural waters. Because of this mineral content, Arkady Yeast Food modifies natural waters to the best standard for bread making. It also reduces the amount of yeast required by more than half, thus shortening the fermentation period, conserving a greater proportion of the food value and natural flavor of the wheat and producing a more nutritious and healthful loaf than can be made under any other known method.

Eminent authorities on scientific food production in this country indorse the WARD process of making bread. The famous German scientists, Professors Emmerich and Loew, also recommend the use of lime salts in bread fed to the soldiers of the German army. Our business reputation and 100% purity guarantee stand back of these indorsements.

Our publicity campaign illustrating the manufacturing methods and describing the materials used in WARD'S BREAD offers conclusive proof that this healthful bread is an honest product and "dares to bear a name in the open."

Thousands of families who formerly did not eat WARD'S BREAD are eating it now with confidence in the knowledge that they are eating the most healthful and wholesome food sold in Boston today!

Try it yourself if you are still a stranger to its palatable excellence. Taste it—test it, and learn how much better, sweeter and more finely flavored it is than other kinds of bread.

Made every day for the people of Boston and vicinity in the Ward Bakery at Cambridge, where visitors are always welcome. We want publicity.

IRVIN COBB PREFERS GOOD OLD HANGINGS

By IRVIN S. COBB.

Copyright 1916, by the Central Press Association.

Chicago, June 10—At an early hour this morning the condensed press, deemed the important developments which had been provided for the "dread occasion," ate a hearty breakfast consisting of ham and eggs, griddle cakes, cantaloupe and two cups of coffee, and while awaiting the arrival of the artificial advisor, smoked a ten-cent cigar and stated that it was prepared to meet its doom.

Meanwhile the trap had been tested and found to be in excellent working order. Shortly after 11 o'clock the watch in the galleries started, but it was an hour later before the crop fell and the Republican national convention inducted its candidate for the presidency.

Shortly thereafter a number of nominating mates for the head of the ticket was selected without undue excitement. In short, the execution which passed off smoothly in every detail, was attended by little or no disorder.

THIS IS NO PROPHECY

The writer would not be misunderstood. In employing the foregoing introduction for the chatty little piece for the paper he must not be considered as indulging in prophecy or in fact feigning to foretell future events, or that the result next November will be in the nature of how he "called" the nominations for the corpse already long deceased.

Nevertheless, because of just as times go in the somewhat torrential and temperamental line, ours and between you and me and the gatepost, a rather tame affair, and doubtlessly will

What he [illegible] discovering to intimate is that the [illegible] hanging and the slow-[illegible] method of [illegible] death seem—for [illegible] all the [illegible] animated enthusiasm which [illegible] mark a legal hanging back in those days before the electric chair had so generally supplanted the good, old-fashioned slip-noose under the left ear of our fathers.

At that, not a word can be said against the decorative ensemble of the ticket. The nomination of Hughes for protective coloration is perfect; it betrays no purring discords. With the hat drawn well down over the forehead the nominee for President might pass for almost any company as the nominee for Vice-President, and vice versa.

DISCORD AVERTED.

Only once, not then but for a few fleeting moments, was any danger threatened to the harmonious whole of the affair, and that was when Mr. Howard Rutledge of Montana, took the platform actuated by a desire that the convention should nominate for Justice Hughes a special runner, Senator Albert Burkett, he believing that with Mr. Burkett's name affixed to the masthead, all the good men and true west of the Mississippi River would rally to the standard.

In fact, Mr. Rutledge felt so sure of such gratifying support for the combination of Hughes and Burkett that he went further in emphatic metaphor than any preceding silver-tongued orator had during this election, and declared it would "sweep like wildfire."

He said the party would be assured of a "triumphant and winning victory," from which remarks the astute audience gathered that he either believed the Republicans might not lose but would be successful. A victory declared in the beginning of the campaign is not quite ordinary victorious victory, but a victory which is both winning and triumphant sets mere nothing else.

WOULD NOT HARKEN.

But the delegates did not harken. The former temper of the Republicans was not that of the historic little boy who, believing that remedy lured him mysteriously assumed that he meant to go out in the garden and swallow one worm, one and one slick one. It put Mr. Rutledge in mind of a game I once played with a resultant alliance calculated to appeal to the reviling artisans vote wherewoever found.

From the jumble of impressions of the last session a few mention extraneous pictures must ever stand out, clear and distinct, in the memory of one watching from the press benches.

[illegible] to close one's eyes to see Governor Willis, the official minister to the Republican party—[illegible] the [illegible] Governor [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TRUCKS OF U.S. TAKEN BY VILLA

New Activity of Bandit Leader Is Reported; Feeling Against the Americans in Mexico Is Intense

Washington, June 10. — Fourteen United States army trucks laden with supplies for the punitive expedition have been captured by Mexicans under Francisco Villa in a rear guard action near Namiquipa, according to an unconfirmed report today.

So far as could be learned here, no official report of the affair had been made to General Funston.

Anti-American feeling in North Mexico has passed beyond the control of the military authorities. General Jacinto Trevino, commander of the Carranzista forces in Chihuahua City, has notified Harry Scobel, the British Consul, that he is unable to guarantee American lives and property the same protection as guaranteed to foreigners. Mr. Scobel is handling the affairs of the United States Consulate in Chihuahua City in the absence of Marion Letcher.

Official information came to military authorities today that Carranza troops south of Namiquipa have threatened American cavalry detachments riding through that country.

AMERICANS ANNOYED.

American troops have been subjected to all kinds of annoyance calculated to bring about an open break, according to the dispatches. The chief form of Carranzista amusement, it is said, is for cavalry detachments to ride straight toward the Americans as though to attack, and then at the last moment suddenly turn to one side.

Carranza forces south of Namiquipa are acting evidently in co-operation with the bandits that infest the region.

With evidence that Francisco Villa has again gathered a formidable force and is now seeking American aid in the vicinity of Santa Barbara, Mexico State Department officials today were attempting to get official reports from consuls concerning whether any Americans are now being slain.

ALARMED AT ATTACK.

Department officials viewed with alarm the reported attack by Villa upon the rear guard of the American punitive expedition near Namiquipa.

It is admitted that, if this be true, Villa has obtained the active support of the natives of that section of Mexico and that his forces will rapidly increase by native civilians flocking to him for the expressed purpose of driving the Americans out.

Gonzales Succeeds Gavira on Border

By International News Service.

El Paso, June 10.—General Gavira, commander of the Mexican forces in the frontier zone, was peremptorily called to Mexico City this afternoon. His orders were signed by Minister of War Obregon. General Francisco Gonzales succeeded to Gavira's command.

The summons received by Gavira caused a sensation in Juarez. He ventured no explanation and left tonight on a special train.

The story has been afoot for several days that Gavira exceeded his authority when he invited General Pershing to confer with him, and that he would shortly hear from Mexico City.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Port Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says:

"The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

"The announcement's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the day."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot-Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over, who are making Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. ANNA E. J. MAGUIRE, now Mrs. William O. Jeffries. City Hall officials helped set aside five-day law.

CITY HALL AIDS IN WEDDING OF MISS MAGUIRE

Red Tape Is Cut for Daughter of Former Alderman; Bride Is Concert Singer.

Miss Anna E. J. Maguire, daughter of former Alderman Patrick J. Maguire, caused a stir in City Hall yesterday in her effort to get married. Her difficulties were finally overcome with the assistance of the Mayor, his secretary, Charles O. Power; City Registrar Edward W. McGlenen, and Judge Sullivan of the Municipal Court.

Miss Maguire's troubles first came to the attention of City Hall when she telephoned to the Mayor's office that she must get married today, as she and her intended husband had arranged to go South at once and they had failed to take out their intentions within the time required by law.

The Mayor promised to straighten out the matter and directed that she come at once to his office. There Secretary Power introduced her to the City Registrar and the preliminary papers were made out. Then, escorted by a marriage bureau clerk, a dash was made for the court house, where arrangements had been made by telephone to keep the doors open until five minutes after 12. Judge Sullivan was in waiting and quickly granted the dispensation.

Last night Miss Maguire was married to William O. Jeffries, an automobile mechanic, by Father Danahy of St. Peter's Church. John Kelley was best man, and Miss Mary Shea was maid of honor. A reception followed at the bride's residence at No. 587 Columbia road, after which the couple left on their intended tour.

Mrs. Jeffries is a well known lyric soprano, and appears on the concert stage under the name of Helene Travers.

LOCATE OWNER OF ABANDONED AUTO

The police of East Dedham street station have discovered that the superintendent of the Ford Motor Company of Newark, N. J., is the owner of the abandoned auto which was found in Waltham street, South End, on May 23. They arrested Lewis F. Mortimer, forty-seven, of New York and Portland, and charged him with the theft. He has been turned over to the Newark police. When arrested in a house in Waltham street, Mortimer had his pawn tickets and a small sum of money in his possession.

SET NEXT FALL FOR NEW HAVEN TRIAL

Washington, June 10.—The retrial of the New Haven directors on charges of bankrupting the road, about which the jury disagreed at the last trial, has been postponed until next Fall, it was stated at the Department of Justice today. If it is later found that the evidence against the directors is too meagre the retrial will in all probability be abandoned.

WINS PROBATION BY TELLING TRUTH

Thomas Cudworth, twenty-three of Lynde street, was rewarded with probation for telling the truth in Municipal court. He was accused of stealing thirty dozen eggs. He pleaded guilty and told how he jammed his pockets full of eggs owned by the Main Egg Company of Commercial street. Judge Creed complimented Cudworth for telling the truth.

ORPET IN LETTERS ASKED LOVE

Hitherto Unpublished Missives Reveal Accused Poisoner of Girl as Most Ardent Wooer

Waukegan, Ill., June 10.—Letters from Will Orpet to Marian Lambert, hitherto unpublished, show how ardently Orpet phrased his missives and how he entreated the girl to love him. One letter said:

"I want to be sure for sure you love me as I do you, and very, very much as I do, also."

The letters, which furnish food for public discussion pending resumption of the murder trial of Orpet Monday morning, were given out today by Prosecutor Dady, as follows:

"Madison, Wis., Feb. 16, 1915.

"Dear Marian—Your letter came this morning and am answering it now so I can get another soon —may be.

"You asked me how much good it would do to tell me to be good. That all depends on whether you want me to be that way, and if you do then it will.

"I was just reading over your letter— fifteenth time—and saw the way you began it. I know that I was named "William," but why rub it in? There is a lot more possible variations— and can't you use one of them?

"Well, if you won't be good, at least be careful, and write as soon as you can, for I'll be waiting anxiously too.

"WILLIAM."

URGES FORGIVENESS.

"Madison, March 15, 1915.

"Dearest—I suppose I must behave, very good now, since you've called me down so harshly. I'll try to, anyway, but please overlook any occasional slips I may make, won't you, dear? You said if I really felt the way I said I did I wouldn't write such foolishness. Don't you know I mean it, or do you think I'm in the habit of saying that sort of thing to every girl who happens to come along? If you do you're very much mistaken, for I don't.

"In there any possibility of Deerfield having a game from the list to the 15th of April? If they do I want to take you to it, so don't forget. If there's no game we'll go to something else, won't we? I've got to see you a lot then, anyway, to make up for the last two months when I haven't seen you. Don't forget to tell me about that when you write, and Marian, if you love me,

BILL."

"Madison, March 26, 1915.

"Dearest Marian—This may surprise you, and I don't wonder, but you see I have been thinking of you, so that I had to do this.

"I shall leave here about 1 o'clock next Thursday and will get in Lake Forest about 5:30. We have to be back Tuesday morning, as I probably told you, but I got an extension of one day. I can hardly wait to see you, dear, and if it weren't that I would get canned in everything, I think I would cut right now and go down to see you. That's the way I feel about you. Funny, isn't it? YOUR BILLY."

AN "IMPORTANT ENGAGEMENT.

Madison, April 24, '15.

"Dearest Marian—Friday, if everything turns out all right, I'll see you. Remember that, for it's important. And if you care to have me I'll tell it to you when I see you, so you will know it's the real thing.

"And by that time, too, I want to know how much you love me, for I've just naturally got to know. You know I can't tell, a hundred and fifty miles away, so well, when I see you I want to know for sure you love me as I do, and very, very much as I do, also.

"When we take that walk next week, for you know we're going to have one, let's go down on the beach. We won't walk so far, but it will take a long time, so arrange accordingly.

(Here follows a paragraph of details indicating that Orpet on his previous visits had established intimate relations with the girl.)

"Well, goodbye, dearest. Be very, very good and write me as soon as you can. With much love, "BILLY.

"P. S.—Also you must fix up so I can see you a lot, for you know we've got a lot of lost time to make up for, and, take it from me, we're going to do it."

FESTIVAL ON COMMON ON CITY'S FOURTH

Spectacular Shakesperean Feature to Be Staged Where 100,000 People May Be Assembled

A spectacular night festival of Shakespearean features is to be given from a stage in the Frog Pond on the Common, as one of the features of the city's observance of Independence Day, Tuesday, July 4. It is possible that more than 100,000 people to assemble in the natural amphitheatre of which the Pond is the centre.

A Shakespeare Tercentenary Committee is working in conjunction with the Independence Day Committee of the Citizens' Public Celebration Association, which is under the supervision of Director of Public Celebrations in various parks and playgrounds of the city, including Mark Antony's oration from "Julius Caesar," with the steps of the Public Library for a stage.

The chairman of the Independence Day Committee is Daniel A. MacKay. The chairman of the Shakespeare Tercentenary Committee is Professor E. Charlton Black.

The official opening of the day's celebration will be a flag-raising on Boston Common at 9 o'clock, at which Mayor Curley will raise the national and city flags. At 10 o'clock the Declaration of Independence will be read from the balcony of the Old State House by Aaron Solomon Aronson, a member of the graduating class of the Public Latin School.

At 10:30 o'clock there will be a meeting in Faneuil Hall, at which the Mayor will preside. Joe Mitchell Chapple will speak on "Americanization!" There will be a reception to newly naturalized citizens of the United States under the direction of James M. Morton, Jr., of the United States District Court.

The committees are:

Patriotic features—Addison L. Winship, chairman; Maxwell Copelof, Philip Cowen, Fannie Hall—John J. Keenan, Frank Leverett, Charles J. Martin, Philip Tuttle.

Athletics—J. Sparrow Ryan, William Tuttle, chairman; E. F. Hopkins, James B. Preston.

Observation—Frank Leverett, chairman; Frank Chouteau Brown, Maxwell Copelof.

Chairmen district committees—Forest Hills district, John R. Archbald; Jamaica Plain, Theodore Barnes; Roslindale, George W. Cartwright; Hyde Park, Henry J. Dana; West Roxbury, Edward F. Bullen; Fort Hill, Edward Farnham; Dorchester, Henry J. Keyes; South End, Alexander I. Peckham.

FREIGHT MEN OF EASTERN S. S. QUIT

The freight handlers employed by the Eastern Steamship Corporation on India, Central and Union wharves struck again yesterday for the third time since Spring began. They demanded an increase of eight cents an hour, or forty cents for day work; sixty cents for night work and eighty cents an hour for Sundays and holidays. The men struck a few weeks ago and their pay was raised from twenty cents an hour to thirty. A week ago they went out again, demanding thirty-five cents an hour, and compromised on thirty-two. The company yesterday refused to meet the latest demand of the men or to offer any compromise.

Ruth Lingley to Be Bride of L. R. Sancrant

Miss Ruth Lingley, a popular East Boston young woman, will become the bride tomorrow evening of Leo R. Sancrant of Detroit.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Walter D. Roberts of St. John's Episcopal Church and the bridal couple will be entertained at dinner at the Thorndike Hotel immediately following the event.

The honeymoon will be spent in the White Mountains by motor. Mr. and Mrs. Sancrant will be at home at No. 69 Falcon street, East Boston, after the first of July.

Young Warrior Is HomeAfterDaring Perils in Europe

Joseph Miroki, a Chicago youth, arrived in Boston yesterday as a coal trimmer on the Belgian steamer Tunesie, from Rotterdam, after more than a year of adventure. He shipped as a hostler from Boston to France at a time when the Germans were pursuing relentless submarine warfare.

He then made a voyage to New Orleans and back to France on another ship. Then he enlisted in the French Foreign Legion with a number of other American boys and served several months in the trenches "somewhere in France."

In May he was the victim of a gas attack and went to the hospital, where he nearly died of lung and throat trouble caused by the gas. He obtained leave to go to England to recuperate, and was arrested as a spy in England. The American consul secured his release. He then shipped on the Tunesie and went to Rotterdam, where he sailed for home.

Miss Corrigan Is 13th Dorchester Telephone Bride

Miss Mary Adelle Corrigan, supervisor of the Dorchester telephone exchange and the thirteenth bride from that exchange in the past year, was married last evening to John L. Lutz, son of Sergeant L. E. Lutz of Station 7. The ceremony was performed in St. Gregory's Church at 6:30 by the Rev. Francis Dolan, D. D.

Miss Ethel Corrigan, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and the groom's brother, Walter J. Lutz, was best man. Miss Corrigan lives at No. 871 Washington street, Dorchester. They are to spend their honeymoon in New York and Washington and live at Hingham for the Summer.

IRISH EDITOR MURDERED, HIS SLAYER INSANE

London, June 10.—A Central News despatch from Dublin announces that the court-martial which tried Captain Bowen-Colthurst on the charge of shooting F. Sheehy Skeffington, editor of the Irish Citizen, and two others, during the recent rebellion in Ireland, has found him guilty, but insane at the time of the shooting.

Captain Bowen-Colthurst was charged with the murder and with the manslaughter of Skeffington and Thomas Dickson and Fred McIntyre.

The court found him guilty of the murder of the three men. The finding has been confirmed by General Maxwell, commanding the military forces.

As Captain Bowen-Colthurst was also found insane, following the usual procedure in such cases, he probably will be ordered "confined during the King's pleasure."

and 22 machine guns. The total prisoners taken by us since June 5 are 25 officers and 1,500 men.

"Eastern and Balkan fronts—Nothing to report."

The French War Office in an official communique today stated:

"In Belgium our artillery shelled the German organizations in the sector of the dunes, causing great destruction and starting two fires, which were followed by explosions.

"To the north of Verdun, the artillery duels continued very active on both banks of the River Meuse. There was no infantry action. During the day our batteries shelled some German columns to the north of Douaumont village.

"In the Vosges to the south of Col. Ste. Marie, some German detachments tried to enter our lines after a violent bombardment, but our machine gun fire forced them back to their own trenches."

Insist Large German Boat Sunk

By International News Service.

London, June 10.—Although the German Admiralty denies it the statement that the battle cruiser Derfflinger was sunk on the way to port is reiterated today in an Amsterdam dispatch, which quotes well-informed travelers arriving at the Dutch port from Berlin.

It is likewise brought to light that the German warship Pommern, sunk in the Jutland battle, was not the battleship of that name. According to a Copenhagen dispatch, the lost ship was a new battle cruiser named after the battleship which a British submarine had sent to the bottom in the Baltic sea in 1915.

The British submarine commander was decorated by the Czar last year for the exploit of the former Pommern.

Officers and men of the Warspite, interviewed at Edinburgh, declare the Germans lost fourteen ships and between 17,000 and 20,000 men in the Jutland battle.

MOLASSES CARGO TO AID ALLIES' CAUSE

The American tanker Cubadist, Captain van Glider, arrived in Boston yesterday from Cuba on her maiden voyage. The big tanker brought nearly two million gallons of molasses, which was pumped out at Copp's Hill wharf. The molasses will be distilled into alcohol and used in the manufacture of explosives for the allies' cause.

COMMANDER MOHR DIED IN SEA FIGHT

An Interesting Lesson in Arithmetic For Women

MADAME, suppose you were conducting a store. And suppose one-fourth of everything sold in the way of apparel and house-furnishings was held out two or three weeks before being returned for credit. Then suppose a considerable part of such merchandise had either been damaged while out or had suffered in value because no longer up to the minute in style.

Wouldn't you have to charge more for everything sold by you than would have been necessary if the privilege of returning merchandise had not been abused?

Well, that's just what Boston shopkeepers have been doing—and you have been paying the penalty in good dollars.

Beginning July 1 it is proposed to correct this evil by limiting to six business days the privilege of returning goods for credit. Other regulations found necessary have been approved, as will be seen by reading what follows. Wise women will co-operate in this movement, realizing that they will profit.

RULES REGULATING RETURN OF MERCHANDISE

Recommended by the Boston Chamber of Commerce and Approved by Leading Retail Merchants

Any article of merchandise which for some good reason is to be returned to a store, must be returned within a reasonable time —SIX business days.

No articles will be accepted for return unless they are substantially in their original condition; neither will merchandise of any kind which has been used or worn be accepted for return unless defective or not as represented.

The sales check must accompany all returnable merchandise.

Gifts of all kinds (Christmas, wedding, birthday, etc.) if returned, will be accepted only in exchange for other merchandise.

All goods cut from the piece at the request of the customer, that would have remnant value only, are returnable at one-third off purchase price.

Uniform tags will be used on articles bought with the privilege of returning. If such tag has been removed from an article it will not be accepted for return.

NON-RETURNABLE

The following articles, for legal, sanitary or other reasons, cannot be exchanged or returned.

Garments that have been altered for the purchaser's use and which are not salable.

Shoes which have been altered, buttons reset, worn or damaged.

Combs, hair brushes and tooth brushes.

Hair goods and hair ornaments.

Rubber toilet articles.

Women's hats which have been made or trimmed specially to the customer's order.

Veiling, neckwear, books, bedding and mattresses.

All merchandise which has been made to order or specially ordered and which is not regularly carried in stock.

EXCEPTIONS

Under the following conditions the above or any goods may be exchanged or returned:

1—Any error on the part of the store, such as wrong size or color or defective workmanship.

These Recommendations Will Take Effect July 1, 1916

BANK OFFICERS' OUTING AROUND BIG FIREPLACE

Members of the Bank Officers' Association proved themselves believers in preparedness at their annual field day at the Riverside Recreation Grounds yesterday, when but two straw hats were counted, the other members wearing Winter headgear and heavy coats.

They also showed that it takes more than a little rain to discourage them. With their wives and families there were 350 in the party, one of the largest picnics in years.

There were some eleventh hour changes in the plans because of the rain, and the ball games and other outdoor sports were given up for the toast part. Instead, the crowd gathered in the big clubhouse, where an immense fire roared in the great fireplace and the wintry weather outside was forgotten.

About the only event that took place according to the program was the swimming exhibition by members of the Brookline Swimming Club.

Those in charge of the festivities agreed that a little rain more or less could make no difference to swimmers. While the grown up bathy youngsters did their tricks in the water, the bank clerks, wrapped in mackintosh and ulster, lined the pool and cheered their efforts.

FAVOR INDOOR SPORTS.

While the rain splashed against the windows, the members and their friends lined up all the indoor sports they could think of and made merry.

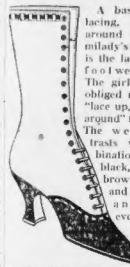
There was dancing, whist and a vaudeville entertainment, in which some of the stars of the old bank officers' shows proved they had lost none of their ability as entertainers.

At 5 o'clock the crowd dodged the raindrops and made a rush to the big tent where supper was served. The tent proved its weather-resisting qualities, there was plenty of food and the lack of formality that always characterizes the annual outing.

When the rain abated for a time in the early evening a few of the most hardy of the young bankers made brief canoe journeys up the river. For the most part, however, they were content to remain in the clubhouse, where people piled the wood high on the roaring fire.

Norman L. Adams of the National Shawmut Bank, the president of the association, was the master of ceremonies. He was assisted by a committee that included Frank W. Bryan, Richard F. Churchill, Harris I. Hyett, Arthur Horne and Joseph E. Scanlon.

Must Lace Her Boots Around as Well as Up



A basket weave lacing, running around the top of milady's high boots, is the latest Boston fool wear novelty. The girls now are obliged not only to "lace up," but "lace around" their shoes. The weave contrasts with combinations of gray, black, ivory or brown kid tops and can be of any color, even red. The first of these appeared in the stores the past week. It's only a question of some time before they appear on Tremont street.

OFFICERS OF MILITIA STUDY IN WET CAMP

Officer's School, South Sudbury, June 10.—After a night under wet canvas the officers of the infantry regiments of the Massachusetts militia today awoke to the first real work of their six-day tour of duty in the annual camp of instruction, which is being held here under the direction of the War Department.

Lieutenant Colonel Beaumont B. Buck, chief inspector-instructor of militia, is in command of the camp. He is assisted by other regular army instructors and additional officers detailed here by Major General Leonard Wood to whip the militia officers into shape for the annual manoeuvres.

The camp was pitched about a mile and a half from the South Sudbury railroad station, on a little knoll. Here five long lines of tents house the officers of the different regiments of the Second Brigade. Yesterday the men came into camp and unpacked their kits in a driving rain storm. An extra large number of non-commissioned officers are on hand this year for instruction along with the officers of the line.

Trench-digging—that is, around the canvas tents—was the general order of the day, and this morning these trenches were running like rivers with the water shed from the roofs of the tents. Rain, however, is nothing new to the officers of the Massachusetts Militia, and they take to it like ducks, even though in the regimental streets the mud is thick.

This year's camp is a day longer than previous camps. The officers will not be through this tour of instruction until Wednesday afternoon. The time will be given over to lectures by the army officers detailed as instructors to the camp, and to tactical hikes by the officers under army instructors on the roads about South Sudbury.

Ten hours is the working period in the camp this year, and each of the officers puts in that time receiving lectures and practical instruction.

The ranking militia officers who are in the camp, under Lieutenant Colonel Buck are Brigadier General E. Leroy Sweetser, commanding the Second Brigade; Colonel L. Lorain, Ninth Regiment; Colonel Frank A. Graves, Eight Regiment, and Colonel Willis Stover, Fifth Regiment, with all of the officers of their command. Major Cahill, of the Adjutant General's office, is also in camp representing that department.

Ex-Mayor Hart in Dudley Street 'L' Maze, but Not Lost

Just after the big news came in from the Coliseum at Chicago yesterday someone called up the Boston AMERICAN office and added to the general clatter by saying that former Mayor Thomas N. Hart had lost himself in the mazes of Dudley street elevated terminal.

It was a staggering report. While Mr. Hart is eighty-seven years old, he is twice as spry as many a man of fifty or less.

He has lived in Boston for the past seventy-four years and knows it like a man knows his favorite armchair.

But the Dudley street elevated might get even "Tom" Hart guessing. Could it be true that Mr. Hart had become so confused by turnstiles and stairways and winding passages that he was forced to ask someone to direct him how to get his car?

Mr. Hart was reached on the telephone at early evening at his summer home in Swampscott. After saying, in answer to a request for a statement on the Republican nomination, that he thought they were "wonderfully good," he was queried about that "lost" report.

He chuckled cheerily, said he was at Dudley street terminal in the afternoon, denied that he was "lost" there, but admitted that the place was "confusing."

But lost—"No, no." And Mr. Hart laughed.

SOMERVILLE BOY IS STABBED WITH PICK

Fletcher F. Mattatall, a blacksmith, living on Congress street, Somerville, was locked up in police headquarters, that city, last night charged with having stabbed Jeremiah O'Sullivan, seventeen, of Linwood street, in the back with an ice pick. The police state Mattatall, saying that the wounded boy, in company with several others, assaulted him.

The boy was sent to the Somerville Hospital, where they say he will probably live, despite the fact that the blade of an ice pick five inches into his back.

MEDFORD LADDER TRUCK WRECKED

The motor ladder truck attached to the Central Fire Station house of Medford last night crashed into a telegraph pole just outside the station driveway, smashing front trucks and headlights, throwing the driver, John Smith, to the street, and severely shaking up the other firemen on the truck. Street car traffic was blocked for over an hour, as the truck could not be moved until a derrick boat was brought. About $500 damage was done.

REVERE K. OF C. WHIST.

Revere Council, Knights of Columbus, will hold a whist party and dance in G. A. R. Hall next Tuesday evening.

ABANDONED BABY IS GIVEN A HOME

The month-old girl who was abandoned in the hallway of the home of Rabbi S. J. Friedenman at No. 19 Allen street, West End, Wednesday evening, by an unidentified woman, has found a home. She has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Saklad of No. 50 Lowell street. Mrs. Saklad said last night she wouldn't part with the baby for all the money in the world.

Mr. and Mrs. Saklad have no little one of their own. They intend to bring up the baby in the Jewish faith and treat it as if it was their own child.

Pinned to the baby's clothes was a note which read: "Dear Rabbi: Please see that my baby is put in a Jewish home and brought up in the Jewish faith, and that it is called Leah. Money will be sent to you from time to time to help to pay for the expense of caring for it."

Mr. Saklad said he will refuse to accept money for the care of the child.

Promise Mayor U. S. Will Strive to Free O'Connor

Mayor Curley has received assurances from Washington that the State Department will exert itself to the utmost to free Bartholomew O'Connor, who is now confined in jail in Dublin, accused of taking part in the Irish rebellion.

Bartholomew O'Connor is brother to Thomas D. O'Connor, a member of the Boston School House Commission, and is a wealthy contractor in Ireland. His Boston relatives maintain that he had no part in the rebellion, and yesterday sought assistance of the Mayor in getting him out of prison.

POLISH FETE AGAIN HALTED BY STORM

The Polish fete which was booked to take place Saturday at Hartford, the estate of Mrs. Charles L. Harding of Dedham, has been postponed three times on account of the weather.

CALLS MEETING TO AID IRELAND

Mayor Curley last night issued the following call for a mass meeting to be held for the purpose of preventing a repetition of famine in Ireland:

"Every liberty-loving and tyranny-defying American, without regard to race, creed or color, is invited to attend a monster mass meeting at Symphony Hall, Sunday, June 18, at 7:30 p. m. The meeting is called for the purpose of preventing a repetition of the famine of 1846 in Ireland.

"America has ever lent a sympathetic ear to the cry of suffering humanity and the generosity of her people is world wide.

"In the event of Mayor being unable to attend the meeting, kindly forward your contributions to Patrick O'Hearn, president of the Hibernia Savings Bank, No. 201 Washington street, Boston.

"Invitations have been extended to Bourke Cockran of New York, Judge John W. Goff of New York, Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia. An orchestra of fifty pieces, donated by the Musicians' Union, will furnish music. Mayor Curley will preside."

TRAIL NEW SUSPECT IN WAKELIN TRAGEDY

Important Evidence Gathered by Police in Hunt for Brutal Slayer of Melrose School Girl

Chief Kerr of Melrose Running Down All Clews, but Is Now Centring Work on Certain Line

Chief of Police George E. Kerr of Melrose said last night that he suspected a certain person as the slayer of little Loretta Winifred Wakelin, and that the suspect was being constantly shadowed.

This was the most direct admission made to date by any of the officials working on the tragedy which has been a mystery for ten days. It indicated that the official inquiry had narrowed as the result of the inquest and that although every available clew was being sifted the authorities have singled out a new suspect and feel that the evidence in hand implicates this person more than any other.

It showed progress and promised early developments. It was the most encouraging announcement of the week. It indicated that evidence cropped out at the inquest which already aided the officials who have been working night and day to solve the case.

Chief Kerr said:

RUN DOWN ALL CLEWS.

"I do not intend to let up on this case until the murderer of 'Tootsie' Wakelin has been brought to justice. I am going to run down every clew called to our attention, no matter how trivial or remote. I have my suspicions of the party whom I think is responsible for the murder of the child and I have my men keeping tabs on the movements of the party.

"I am co-operating with the State police along definite lines mapped out by them concerning this party. I want to say to the people of Melrose through the Boston AMERICAN that the machinery of the police department is being exerted to bring the murderer of the Wakelin girl to justice."

Chief Kerr and his subordinates put in a busy day in spite of the heavy downpour. They did not overlook a single clew. Detective Sergeant Doherty, who has been one of the most active since the inquiry began, was furnished with a long list of names last night by Chief Kerr. Not a home in the vicinity of the murder was overlooked. Every resident of that section has been interrogated.

SEARCH IS WIDENED.

Among the names of the latest persons interviewed were Arthur Fisher, Robert Davis, Mrs. Robert Sheppard, Albert Sheppard, Hazel Hawes, Ruth Monahan, Walter Moore, Samuel Learning, Lillian Fisher, Gladys Thomas, Dorothy Fisher, Mrs. Joseph Richards, Mildred Fisher, Mary Barnes and Ruth Gooby.

It was explained by Chief Kerr that some of these persons may have seen something on the morning of the murder which will aid the authorities in piecing their case against the latest suspect. It meant that the police had widened their search to a house-to-house canvass.

Chief Kerr and Sergeant Doherty yesterday trailed rumors of the "wild man" reported to have terrorized women in Franklin Heights section of Revere on the day little Loretta Winifred Wakelin was strangled in Melrose.

MANY NEW RUMORS.

Another flock of rumors descended on Melrose police headquarters yesterday and most of them were quickly discarded. The police report that the theory that the child was killed by an automobile and carried into the bushes and mutilated to cover the accident, is disputed by pathological features.

They say that this theory is made untenable by the finger marks in the victim's neck, which caused death by slow strangulation, as reported officially by Medical Examiner Roscoe B. Perley of Melrose, and that the entire absence of cuts or abrasions on the child's face and arms and the character of the hacking of the lower body all prove the automobile theory to be empty and fantastic.

The police say that the nature of the slashing of the lower body is consistent with having been made with strong fingers or a stick, and that the scant flow of blood would indicate that attack was only pre-

FOUR BOYS SHOT IN BATTLE OF 'HOLLOW'

Pair of Lads, Armed with Air Rifles, Open Brisk Attack from Trenches on the River Front

The Battle of the "Hollow" was fought and won in Chelsea yesterday.

The net results were:

Four boys wounded with air-rifle pellets.

Two boys in full retreat, but managing to save their arms and ammunition.

Terrific excitement in the entire sector of the "Hollow."

The battle broke out of a clear sky, as they say. The European war wasn't half so unexpected when it actually came.

FIRST TIME UNDER FIRE.

Two boys, armed with very good air rifles, violated all waterfront rights suddenly by invading the Metropolitan Coal Company's wharf beside the Mystic river.

The international situation was further complicated by the fact that the Austrian steamer Erny is interned nearby.

The invading force consisted, the police say in official communique, of Chilson Orluk and his supporting force, to wit—another lad about the same age.

General Orluk and his command cunningly entrenched themselves behind a stringpiece of the wharf. They trained their weapons to command the approaching roadway.

Enemy scouts appeared. They consisted of John Szwankowski, twelve years, of No. 32 Medford street, and eleven-year-old Paul Szumski, who lives opposite John.

They did not know they were enemy scouts. They had never been under fire.

But General Orluk and his forces knew them for enemies and fired with surprising accuracy. Szwankowski was shot in the right side, Szumski in the right wrist. The wounded leaped with yelps, turned and fled.

RETREAT TO COAL POCKET

The air-rifle pair awaited further attack with confidence born of initial success. Along came more enemy scouts—just as unsuspecting as the first.

Again the air-rifles opened with full effect. Richard Curran of the latest advance was shot in the left arm. His home is at No. 3 Waverly place, whither he retreated with anguished howls.

Walter Jankofsky, Curran's companion, was shot in the right leg. He made what haste he could for No. 1 Howell court, where he reported to the home authorities.

By this time the news had spread. A fireman from a neighboring factory gallantly advanced to charge the entrenched pair.

He was given such a raking fire of air-rifle pellets that he retreated. Then came the seasoned veterans of many a Chelsea combat, Police Inspector William Galline and Special Officer Edward J. Isbister. Neither were in uniform.

General Orluk and his army (of one) prepared to resist. But, when the official army came within recognizing distance, General Orluk and his force decided to evacuate.

This they did with squirrel-like agility. They left their trench, entered into a long coal pocket and were effectually lost to view in the gloomy and labyrinthian interior.

SURGICAL CORPS CALLED.

The police charged into the pockets but found neither boys nor air rifles. After it was apparent that the trenchers had escaped for the present at least the police forces returned to field headquarters, where a general warrant, charging assault with a dangerous weapon, was issued against Orluk.

Meanwhile the surgical corps, in the person of City Physician Frank Mahoney, attended two of the boys, while other physicians treated the other two wounded.

GIVE ENTERTAINMENT FOR BLIND INMATES

The inmates of the Perkins Institution for the Blind in Watertown were entertained this afternoon through the efforts of Mrs. Louis Rosenbaum of the Fenway. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Sunday School of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue. Mrs. Rosenbaum presided. The principal entertainers included three sisters, Miss Tillie Jay, Miss Nannie Jay and Miss Rita Jay. They rendered both vocal and instrumental selections.

BURGLARS LOOT L. A. GINSBURG'S ELM HILL HOME

Believe Professional Thieves Stole Jewels and Defaced $1,100 Ivory Chamber Set.

Professional burglars are believed to be responsible for breaking into the home of Louis A. Ginsburg at No. 246 Seaver street, Roxbury, Thursday night, and stealing jewelry valued at several hundred dollars and defacing an ivory chamber set valued at $1,100.

Entrance was gained to the house by forcing two front doors, and the thieves were so clever that no mark was left by the instrument used to force the doors, but the police hope to secure finger prints from furniture and closet doors that will result in the capture of the burglars.

The family closed the house on June 2 for the Summer and are now at their Summer home in Winthrop. The house is in the exclusive Elm Hill district and the break was discovered by a watchman on the premises.

The "preparedness" of Mr. Ginsburg in placing the most valuable jewelry in a safe deposit vault saved it from being stolen.

Every room and closet in the house was entered and drawers in the dresser of Mr. and Mrs. Ginsburg were torn open by the thieves, who damaged the valuable furniture.

A small sum of money and the wardrobes of Mr. Ginsburg and his wife were thrown about the rooms and a loaded revolver was handled by the thieves, from which the police hope to secure finger prints.

Until Mrs. Ginsburg makes an inventory of the stolen articles, Mr. Ginsburg said he would be unable to state the exact loss.

Mr. Ginsburg is a trustee of the Children's Institutions Department of the city.

IMPOSE FINE FOR WORK ON SUNDAY

Frank Laurinaitis and Joseph Valaska, charged with doing unnecessary work on the Lord's day, were each fined $10 in South Boston court. They are engaged in the photographic business at No. 259 West Fourth street. The police of Division 6 have been prosecuting a campaign against Sunday law breakers.

BRITISH TAKE DYES ON DUTCH STEAMER

By International News Service.

Berlin, via Sayville, June 10.—Several Dutch steamers bound for the Dutch Indies have been held up by the British and forced to unload their cargoes of analine dyes, says the Overseas News Agency. The information is attributed to the Dutch paper Handelsblad.

2-ALARM FIRE AT FACTORY IN JAMAICA PLAIN

Union Steel Casting Works Plant Destroyed; Building of Noble Foss in Peril.

The aeroplane factory owned by Noble Foss, son of the former Governor, and adjoining buildings had a narrow escape in a two-alarm fire yesterday, which destroyed the plant of the Union Steel Casting Company, in the rear of Bartlett square, Jamaica Plain. Chief McDonough placed the loss at $20,000, while treasurer F. M. Russell of the company stated to the AMERICAN that damage to the building amounted to $50,000, and that the machinery and plant damage would total $100,000 more.

The fire started, it is believed, from a spark from the melting apparatus. About 50 men are employed in the casting works, and they tried to extinguish the fire with sand and water. With the arrival of the apparatus it was necessary to lay hose nearly 1,000 feet.

Next to the burned building is a three-story brick structure, occupied by the Eastern Chemical Company and by the Dorchester Brass and Aluminum Company. These concerns were not damaged, although at one time the building was threatened. Back of the burned building is a five-story brick factory, where young Foss is building aeroplanes.

EXTRA TRAINS FOR TECH WEEK

The Boston Elevated will provide extra train service in the Cambridge subway during the Technology celebration. The service connects the Kendall square station with the Tremont subway and Washington street tunnel, and provides the best means of reaching the Technology grounds. There will be no cars operated over Harvard Bridge between 2 and 6 o'clock Monday afternoon and between 7 and 10:30 Tuesday evening.

TO OPEN 'HOLM LEA' AGAIN TO VISITORS

Only a few visited the Charles S. Sargent estate, Holm Lea, in Brookline, yesterday. Those who did found the weather had not affected the profusion of azaleas and rhododendrons. With more rain scheduled for today, and owing to the fact that the bloom of several of the exhibits can scarcely last a week, another afternoon will be selected Monday for the reception of visitors.

FORTUNE AWAITS HEIR OF GRIFFIN

A small fortune is awaiting for anyone who can prove relationship to William, James Griffin, an English petty officer, killed in the war. He is though by the British authorities to be a native of Boston, where he was born in 1889.

Women Graduates of Tech Have Won Distinguished Places in World Affairs

At this time, when the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is taking a great step forward in moving into its magnificent quarters across the Charles, it is fitting that the achievements of some of the Technology women should be better known. Between seven and eight hundred women have enrolled there at one time or another, and about one hudred of these have taken degrees.

First of these in everyone's mind comes Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, whose death a few years ago was deeply felt. In 1871 Ellen H. Swallow, afterwards the wife of Professor Robert H. Richards, was admitted as a special student in chemistry, and two years later was granted a degree. It was largely through her influence that the doors began to open to other women.

In 1878 the Women's Laboratory was established, and a year or two later the corporation voted to admit women as regular students for degrees. For over a quarter of a century Mrs. Richards was an instructor of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. During that time she was in fact, though not in name, a Dean of Women.

Her special contribution to the world was pioneer work in home economics and euthenics, or the science of controllable environment. She had much to do with starting the New England Kitchen, an experiment of great value, although not in just the way which its promoters expected. From this came two things, the Rumford Kitchen, at the World's Fair in Chicago, a part of the Massachusetts State exhibit, a remarkable educational experiment; and the school lunch project.

AUTHOR OF BOOKS.

At that time laymen knew almost nothing about food principles and their relation to the human body. In these days when school children learn about proteids and carbohydrates, we forget how recent this dissemination of knowledge is and how much we owe to a few pioneers like Mrs. Ellen H. Richards. The present New England Kitchen serves lunches to about 5,000 high school pupils daily and the movement has spread over the country.

What use have other women students at Tech made of their scientific training? That question is partly answered in a booklet just issued entitled "Technology Women." It shows that nearly a score have held college fellowships at Yale, Johns Hopkins, Wellesley, Clark University, Chicago University, Bryn Mawr, Simmons, or in Europe.

Perhaps most notable among these is Miss Margaret E. Maltby, who for three years held European fellowships given by Technology and the Association of Collegiate Alumnae and is now teaching at Barnard College, Columbia University.

HAVE WON SUCCESS.

Another well known graduate and a Boston woman is Miss Marion Talbot, Dean of Women at Chicago University. Her work has been largely along the line of sanitary science, household administration and home economics. As a teacher and writer in this field she has done much valuable work.

Miss Isabel F. Hyams is trustee of the Boston Consumptives' Hospital and active in many social welfare organizations. Mrs. Thomas Carpenter is consulting dietician for hospitals in Buffalo. Miss Anna B. Gallup is curator of the Children's Museum, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Alice Peloubet Norton, editor of the Journal of Home Economics, has done much work as a dietician. Miss Angela Courtney, formerly at the Carnegie Nutritive Laboratory in Boston, is now associate in Chemistry at the Rockefeller Institution, New York. Mrs. Margaret J. Stannard, director of the Garland School for Homemaking in Boston, is pioneer in a somewhat new field of education.

Dr. Alice W. Talbot is professor of Obstetrics in the Women's College of Pennsylvania. Miss Edith Beckler is bacteriologist with the Massachusetts State Department of Health.

Miss Louis L. Howe and Miss Eleanor Manning are partners in an architectural firm in Boston. Miss Mabel K. Babcock, president of the Technology Women's Association, is a landscape architect.

BIG FIGURES OF SCIENCE HERE FOR TECH WEEK

Edison, Bell and Orville Wright Will Have Part in the Exercises.

A "Who's Who in Science" might be written about the men who will be in Boston the first three days of the week to attend the big double celebration incident to the dedication of the new Technology buildings and the fiftieth birthday anniversary of the Institute.

Technology men will hold sway in every prominent hotel in the city, and Tech cheers and songs will be heard in every lobby and dining-room. Many reservations were made months ago and the stranger in town in search of a room will have a hard time of it.

The Copley-Plaza will be the headquarters for the host of alumni, and every room there was engaged weeks ago. One fore-handed graduate from a distant point made a reservation last Summer.

The same rule held good all over town. A regular patron of a Back Bay hotel called there yesterday for a room. There was none to be had and the hotel manager, eager to please a good patron called up nine other houses before he satisfied his guest.

Boston, this week, probably will house the greatest body of eminent men of science that ever before congregated in one city. They are the men who have done the really big things of the world whose names are household words the world over.

Most prominent of all perhaps, is Thomas A. Edison, a loyal friend and admirer of Tech who will be prominent in the formal exercises.

Orville Wright, who, working with his brother Wilbur, was the first man to build an aeroplane that would fly, will be prominent in the festivities, and the old aeroplane itself will be on exhibition at the new Technology Museum.

Other men of scientific prominence are Theodore N. Vail, head of the American Telephone Company, Coleman du Pont, Charles A. Stone, head of Stone & Webster and his partner, Edwin S. Webster, and two other members of the famous du Pont family, Alfred and Pierre.

Admiral Washington Lee Capp of London, whose name is known in scientific and naval circles the world over, will be another honored guest.

THRONG TO TECH FOR BIG JUBILEE

$10,000,000 Group of Buildings in Cambridge to Be Dedicated in Great Three-Day Celebration

Class Day Tomorrow, Pageant on Charles River Tuesday and Dedication Principal Events

Tech men from all over the country turned their eyes—and their feet or their auto headlights, if possible—toward Boston today, for the greatest event in Tech's history is about to occur.

The opening event, the dress rehearsal of the masque and pageant, which was set for last night, was postponed on account of the rain until tomorrow evening.

Tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, he Institute will celebrate its golden Jubilee, graduate the class of 1916, and formally dedicate the "$10,000,000 Group" of new buildings across the Charles River.

Thousands of Tech men will gather for the events; and scores, perhaps hundreds, of Tech women will do likewise. For Technology is not a man's college. Its women graduates have won their share of fame.

The next three days will be a hurly-burly of events for Tech folk; each following each with such rapidity that a secretary and an adding machine will be necessary to keep tabs on just what is happening.

INFLUX STARTED.

The influx of Tech men began yesterday—had begun, in some measure, several days before. But the first real flood of them comes today in automobiles, a procession a mile long, from northern New York State; and they will come tomorrow, stepping on each other's heels in their eagerness. A special steamer will bring the New York contingent, landing here at 10 o'clock.

The events of the three days are divided, roughly, as follows:

TUESDAY—Alumni picnic at Nantasket; masque pageant in the evening on the Basin and in the Court among the new buildigs.

WEDNESDAY—Dedication of the new buildings, and alumni banquet.

The big pageant of automobiles from northern New York State will be met at Weston and escorted into Boston, this afternoon, by a delegation of Tech men.

Tomorrow morning, the New York boat will likewise be met and the delegation escorted to headquarters.

The Technology regiment of soldiers, Tech men, will form a prominent part in the three days of festivities, serving as escorts, guides and the like, and parading and being reviewed in between times.

Preparations for the great events have been worked out with true "Tech Efficiency." Each department of the work has been in charge of engineers of experience, Tech graduates, and men who have weather'd the storms of the business world since their graduation.

EXPERT SUPERVISION.

An expert, for instance, has superintended the task of preparing the Court of Honor for the masque and pageant, levelling the ground, putting in sand and gravel, and otherwise preparing of the gathering. Likewise, the wharves built at each side of the basin to accommodate the Bucentaur, the Venetian barge which will bear the architects across the river, are the design of Tech men.

The Bucentaur herself is one of the most impressive, is certainly the strangest in appearance, of all the craft in the Basin as seen. She is 100 feet long and of 18-foot beam, and her general design was suggested by Professor Ralph Adams Cram, the architect who also outlined the original scenario of the masque and pageant to be given Tuesday night.

That tremendous spectacle will be for the outside spectator the most impressive feature of the whole celebration.

The masque represents "The Conquest of Chaos by Technology." The original scenario, drafted by Mr. Cram, has been amplified and expanded in scope.

self present solo dance in the course of the spectacle.

The masque will be carried out largely by men. There will be close to a thousand Tech seniors and undergraduates in the various processions and choruses and throngs. In the "Procession of Civilized Man" alone there will be 700 men.

About seventy-five women will be in the masque, forming two dancing groups and participating in the procession.

800 IN THE CHORUS.

In the chorus there will be more than 800 men and women.

James Ecker has composed or arranged the various musical numbers. Some are selections and arrangements from the classics, some his own composition.

The costumes were designed by C. Howard Walker, and Professor J E. Rogers wrote the words for the choruses.

Earth—John Coldwell.

Air—Walter S. Frasier.

Electricity—J. Paul Gardner.

Fire—James de G. May.

The women soloists are Elsie Parkinson as "Water" and Vianna Knowlton as "Steam." Fritz Bolay is "Prometheus."

The masque opens with Chaos, shows the Elements supreme, then introduces Primitive Man, allows him to capture Fire and, by the aid of Will and Wisdom win supremacy over Nature. Arrogance, Vainglory and Greed appear. War follows; Righteousness quells the tumult. Then follows the processional of civilization; till at length the searchlight's beams, reaching out across the sea, pick out upon the water the barge Bucentaur, bringing Technology, the Alma Mater, to be enthroned.

A chorus modelled upon the chorus in the Greek tragedy outlines the action as it progresses; and pantomimes and dances illumine the story.

Miss Tanner portrays the spirit of the Time Spirit. The Primordial Men are Tech students, selected for their brawn.

The lighting effects will be the most striking single feature of the masque. They have been arranged by the same expert who designed the lighting at the San Francisco Exposition. Lights, concentrated from hidden vantage points, will illumine the figures in the masque and the barge as it crosses the river. President Maclaurin and his guests and the archives of Technology will be aboard the barge in its progress.

The great display of water craft, torpedo boats, submarines, hydroaeroplanes and submarine chasers on the Charles River basin will be the most interesting public feature tomorrow afternoon.

Throughout the three days of the celebration there will be a display, "Fifty Years of Technology," of some of the achievements of science during that period. James P. Munroe, '82, has arranged the exhibition. The most interesting exhibit will probably be the first Wright aeroplane to fly. Orville Wright is a guest of the Institute at the dedication, and he has had the aeroplane assembled and sent on for exhibition. The first flight was made December 17, 1903, thirteen years ago, at Kitty Hawk, N. J., and covered 120 feet, rising only a few feet from the ground.

The aeroplane was brought by the wind after the flights of that day and was wrecked and never flown again. It was badly damaged during the Dayton flood, but has been reassembled for this occasion.

A remarkable feature of the banquet which on Wednesday evening will close the celebration will be the telephone "stunt."

Speakers at the banquet will not only be heard in Symphony Hall, where the banquet will be held, but by extension telephone sets and watch case receivers their words will be audible to audiences of Tech men all over the country.

Just about every Tech man east of the Hudson will be in Boston that night; but every Tech association west of the Hudson will be gathered for its own celebration, and the extension telephones will carry the speeches to assemblies at the following places:

New York, Albany, Schenectady, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Washington, Atlanta, Birmingham, Louisville, New Orleans, Akron, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dayton, Indianapolis, Detroit, Milwaukee, Chicago, Urgana, Minneapolis, Duluth, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Butte, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle and Spokane.

"TECH" PUBLICATION TO "COVER" EVENTS

Five special issues will be published by the "Tech," the undergraduate publication of Technology, during the Tech celebration, and the entire round of festivities will be covered with care and thoroughness.

Perhaps the most enterprising bit of journalism ever accomplished by a college paper will be the account of the trip of the alumni from New York to Boston, Sunday night.

Special writers, a cartoonist and a photographer, all members of the regular staff of the "Tech," will make the trip. By special arrangement with the Marconi Company a complete account of the voyage will be flashed by wireless to Boston in time for the corporation in the Monday issue of the paper.

Not content with this bit of journalistic enterprise, the first 500 papers printed will be sent down the harbor by a fast motor boat in time to meet the Bunker Hill off Boston Light at 7 o'clock in the morning, for the benefit of the New York delegation coming on that boat.

America Must Train Men in Science, Says Head of Technology

PHOTOGRAPH BY LOUIS FABIAN BACHRACH

Richard C. MacLaurin, head of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which is moving to its new site across the Charles River this week.

By RICHARD C. MACLAURIN,
President Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

THE celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Technology and the dedication of its new buildings are attracting much attention not only locally, but throughout the country.

The institute has had a wonderful history.

It began half a century ago as a small and purely local institution and now its influence is felt throughout the length and breadth of the United States and far beyond its borders.

Thousands of alumni from all parts of the country are flocking to Boston to take part in the exercises this week.

These men represent a type that is becoming more and more indispensable in the solution of the problems of industry, men who are thoroughly grounded in the principles of modern science and understand the application of those principles to the practical problems of the day.

The presence of such a group here and the dedication of splendid buildings to a public purpose would arouse interest under any circumstances.

It arouses special interest today because the need of technically trained men is more clearly recognized than ever before in the history of the world.

Even before the war far-sighted men had seen that the old methods of industry were doomed and that the prosperity of the country must depend on the organization of industry on a thoroughly scientific basis and the elimination of old-fashioned methods in the carrying on of industry by "rule of thumb."

The war has emphasized the necessity of a change.

It has given a dramatic and convincing demonstration of the advantage of scientific methods both in peace and war.

It has brought home to the country more clearly than would otherwise have been possible the absolute necessity of industrial preparedness.

For this great task the country needs a supply, and a large supply, of well trained men.

Those men are becoming more and more indispensable to captains of industry, and if they have any organizing capacity they are becoming captains of industry themselves.

If America, as we all hope, is to take the lead amongst the industrial nations of the world, it must train men in scientific methods at least as thoroughly as any other nation, and having trained these men, must make full use of them.

They must be men of brains and energy not confined to any one class, but taken, as have been the students of Technology in the past, from all ranks of society that can furnish the right material.

When the war is over a great industrial struggle will inevitably follow and go on continuously.

That war will be waged as ruthlessly as a war of armaments, and the nation that lacks an adequate supply of the right weapons will go down as surely as a defenceless country attacked by a first-class military power.

Peace will bring us new and difficult problems, and the success that we expect to win will be no easy victory.

It may be that we will suffer defeat as nations today are suffering through over-confidence due to past achievements.

Undoubtedly we have won wonderful successes in the industrial field, but the conditions that made for those successes are rapidly changing, and if we are not alert enough to arm ourselves with the newest weapons we shall inevitably go down.

To have the strongest possible technical schools is vital to the industrial prosperity of the nation, and here in Massachusetts we have set ourselves the task of building up a great school adequate to the needs of the country.

This is a national task calling for interest and support not merely from Massachusetts, but from all sections of the United States.

HOW TECH WOMEN WILL OBSERVE WEEK

Technology, in the popular mind, is a man's college. But its women undergraduates have won honors for themselves, and they have arranged their part in the festivities of the next three days.

The first event of the week for women is the dinner at the Copley-Plaza Monday evening, while the men are at the City Club smoker.

The women will register at headquarters in the Copley-Plaza on Monday, instead of in the Margaret Clarke Room in Trinity Place as originally planned.

Miss Jessie F. Emery of The Warren, Roxbury, heads the women's hospitality committee.

The women laid their own plans for their observances. The M. I. T. Women's Association had the work in charge. Miss Mabel K. Babcock of Wellesley Hills is president of that association, and Miss Clara P. Ames of No. 29 Newbury street is secretary.

The Monday evening dinner will follow a reception in the foyer of the hotel. The dining room will be set with tables for ten each, and following the dinner there will be music and a monologue by Beatrice Hereford. At half past ten in the evening an escort of Tech military students will arrive to guide the women to the steps of Rogers building for the final cheering.

On Wednesday there will be a luncheon for women at Riverbank Court, to which more than 500 acceptances have already been received.

In the receiving line at the reception preceding the Monday dinner will be the president of the M. I. T. Women's Association, Miss Mabel K. Babcock, Mrs. Richard C. Maclaurin and Miss Susan Sloan.

The chairman of the hospitality committee is Miss Elizabeth F. Hyams. Miss Lillian J. MacRae is chief usher, assisted by young women now taking courses at the institute.

COMPLETE PROGRAM OF TECHNOLOGY WEEK

Here is a complete program of the events of the Golden Jubilee of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, marked by the dedication of the new buildings across the Charles.

SUNDAY, JUNE 11.

Morning—Baccalaureate sermon to the senior class, in the New Old South Church.

4 p. m.—Automobiles leave Copley square for Weston, where they will meet the Tech alumni coming in automobiles from Northern New York State, and escort them to Boston.

MONDAY, JUNE 12.

10 a. m.—Class Day exercises open in Huntington Hall, Rogers Building; later transfer to the new buildings.

10:10 a. m.—"Farewell to Rogers." President McLaurin will introduce the orator of the day, James P. Munroe, '82.

2:00 p. m.—Laying corner stone of the Walker Memorial. Professor Harry W. Tyler, marshal. M. I. T. battalion will escort procession. Address by President McLaurin. Presentation by Professor C. E. A. Winslow, '98. Response: Undergraduates, E. P. Brooks, family, Dr. Francis Walker, '72.

2:30 p. m.—"Old Home Afternoon." Inspection of new buildings, President's reception and tea.

5:30 p. m.—Charles River Basin Water Carnival.

2:30 p. m.—Volunteer patrol squadron, speeding.

2:45 p. m.—Sea sled, motor boats, speeding.

5:30 p. m.—Power squadron evolutions.

4:00 p. m.—Yacht race starts.

4:15 p. m.—Race of M. I. T. varsity eight and Farragut Boat Club.

4:30 p. m.—Canoe, sailing canoes and war canoes, start.

5:30 p. m.—Canoe tandems race starts.

5:40 p. m.—Canoe singles race starts. Military kite balloon exhibition. Two torpedo boats and submarine in exhibition.

6:00 p. m.—Class dinners at City Club and elsewhere.

8:00 p. m.—Smoker at City Club for alumni, "Golden Jubilee." Governor and State officials to be present.

8:00 p. m.—Dress rehearsal of masque and pageant in the court of the new buildings.

TUESDAY, JUNE 13.

9:30 a. m.—First boat for Nantasket. "Nantasket Day" for the alumni. All day program there, with luncheon, parade, class stunts, etc.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14.

Morning—Graduation exercises in Huntington Hall, Rogers Building.

11:30 a. m.—Technology Clubs Associated meet in Walker Building. Business meeting.

12:00 noon—Departmental luncheon at the Somerset. Department heads and prominent alumni will speak.

12:00 noon—Buffet luncheon for women at Riverbank court.

3:15 p. m.—Alumni march to Great Court, in the new buildings for the dedication exercises.

3:30 p. m.—Academic procession, W. T. Sedgwick, marshal.

3:00 p. m.—Dedicatory exercises, addresses by President McLaurin, Governor McCall, President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge in the address of the day.

6:45 p. m.—Banquet, Symphony Hall. Seniors welcomed to alumni association by C. A. Stone, president of the association. Addresses by Thomas A. Edison, Alexander Graham Bell and others.

DESTROYERS JOIN TECH WEEK FLEET

The destroyers Rogers and du Pont and a navy launch steamed into the Charles River basin yesterday, preparatory to taking part in the new Technology water pageant this week. A fleet of four miniature battleships, which were constructed at the Charlestown Navy Yard recently, and five fast motor boats of the volunteer power squadron, will enter the basin today.

ABOLISHED BOARD WILL DIRECT WORK

Building operations at the various institutions under the control of the State Board of Insanity are to be supervised by the present commission and will not be interfered with by the recent legislative act abolishing that organization. As a result bids for contracts and all preliminary work will be directed by the board that has been ordered abolished.

COMFORT, Security and Service—tire elements most desired—Goodyear Cord Tires give you in utmost measure.

Marimba Records
A Musical Novelty

THE instant, widespread success of the first Columbia marimba records proved the popularity of this novel form of musical expression. The ringing clearness of the higher notes, the deep, booming bass of the lower, the tremendous resonance of this instrument give a new and interesting quality to even familiar music. These records are splendid reproductions of the power of marimba tone:

Stranded Craft Breaks Up Cargo Strews Plum Island

Wreck of the schooner Virginia, which went ashore at Salisbury Beach, and her crew of five men, who were rescued in breeches buoy.

Newburyport, June 10 — The schooner Josie, which went ashore on Plum Island on Friday, is rapidly breaking up and the beach is strewn with her cargo of lobs. The schooner Virginia, stranded on Salisbury Beach, is still intact, but it is feared she cannot be floated.

Captain Augustus Mitchell of Machias, cook Samuel Colson and Edgar Berry, the three men aboard the Josie when she struck, were lucky to escape. Berry came ashore half on a raft and the other two on the life saver. He narrowly escaped being dragged down by the boiling surf. The captain and the cook were in such a perilously late after their battle with the waves that they were taken ashore in the boat.

The other wreck occurred off Salisbury Beach Tuesday night drove the two-masted schooner Virginia bound from Clementsport, N. S., to Lynn laden with hardwood, ashore, and early Friday morning she narrowly escaped striking a ledge. The gear parted later in the day, leaving the vessel at the mercy of the wind and waves.

The schooner finally became unmanageable, and when off Salisbury Beach headed into the sand and began pounding to pieces. The situation of the five members of the crew was perilous until the vessel's plight was discovered from shore and the life saving crew notified.

A breeches buoy was finally rigged and the five men, Captain Robinson, Mate Frank W. Ring, cook Ring and his two sons, Ernest and William Ring, all of Clementsport, brought safely ashore.

BACK BAY HOTEL CHANGES ITS NAME

It was the New Trafalgar. Now it is the Hotel Colonial.

The widely known and popular hostelry on Massachusetts avenue has been renamed by the new owners, Messrs. Pisciono, who have planned, ever since they assumed direction of the hotel, to make it one of their own selection. The name Hotel Colonial is regarded as particularly appropriate for this historic building, this section of colonial interest. Patrons of the hotel who include a considerable number of celebrities, will find the new name no change, save lunch and appointments.

MRS. STIVANELLO TO SING TOMORROW

The grand opera concert of vocal and instrumental music at Jordan Hall, which was postponed from last Monday night, will be held tomorrow night at the same place. The concert will be given by Mrs. Beatrice B. Stivanello, soprano; Peter Venerandi, tenor; Miss Whilelmina Layino, pianist, W. Fredericella, violin and D. Faser Pabie Favrill accompanist. The program will include selections from the works of Chopin, Verdi, Ernst, Lost, Giordano, Wieniawsky and a duet for soprano and tenor from "Cavalleria Rusticana."

ZIONISTS WILL HEAR BRANDEIS

Boston Zion sts will be well represented at the [illegible] convention of Zionists of America to open June 2 in Philadelphia. The most important of the Zionist organizations which will come for this convention is the Provisional Executive Committee for Zionist Affairs, of which Justice Louis D. Brandeis is chairman. This body was organized August 14, 1914, a few weeks after the outbreak of the war, and was created in order to take up the work of the International Zionist organization.

RECLAMATION OF FLATS IS RUSHED

Work at East Boston Going Ahead Faster Than Called for by Contract.

The reclamation of 2 of the flats of the South Boston district is showing great signs of progress. Work is going ahead more rapidly than called for under the contract.

It was but less than three months ago and [illegible] the property approximately 1,000,000 cubic yards, or about 1,500,000 tons of material dredged from various parts of the harbor. Brought to the East Boston flats, [illegible]

Already over 1,000,000 square feet, about 4,000,000 feet of timber [illegible] been driven in the construction of the 2,000 foot bulkhead being built on the flats at Jeffries Point, and in addition about 170,000 cubic yards or 250,000 tons of material have also been dredged from the anchorage basin in the harbor and placed on both sides of the bulkhead to form one wide, [illegible] thirty-five acres being reclaimed from the sea. The entire area [illegible] fill will be made by pumping the dredged material into a discharge [illegible] tion running on natural support.

The tract of land being made will be a half-mile long and varying in width up to 500 feet. It is [illegible] feet to a height of fifteen feet above low water mark and will provide [illegible] for the future piers of the port as laid down in the comprehensive plan for the development of the harbor as accepted by the Legislature of 1911. It is directly [illegible] the old Marginal street, but [illegible] thereby providing [illegible] to be [illegible] and street [illegible] portation connection and facilities.

The cost of the work [illegible] tract will be [illegible] and 32 acres [illegible] be completed next Spring when about 1,500,000 of the 30,000,000 square feet of flats owned by the State, lying off the East Boston shore, [illegible] reclaimed. It will [illegible] cleared into the harbor [illegible] a depth of 6 cents per foot.

CLUB WOMAN IS DYNAMIC FORCE, SAYS LEADER

Mrs Dowling Shows How Society Butterfly Is Replaced by Workers for Progress.

By JEAN MORGAN.

"The butterfly society woman is out of date—she is wisely out-distanced by her more dynamic sister, the club-woman." So declared one of the distinguished speakers at the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in New York.

"Of course, there will always be the pretty, fluffy, clinging-vine woman, but the one who can combine with feminine personality the companionship of mind and purpose is the woman of the day."

Mrs. Fred E. Dowling, who was there as a delegate from her Boston club, stopped long enough in her direction of household matters to tell me of some of the inspiration she had gotten there.

SEES IT EVERYWHERE.

"Yes, I see it everywhere" she continued, "this reaching out of the social circle, the expansion of women. Mere social activities are no longer satisfying."

In New York it was very evident. Here in Boston it is even more so. Take for illustration our Governor's wife, Mrs Murray, with every opportunity to give the afternoon tea table head, dressing like or preside as a queen, is instead a most earnest support of the question of women's clubs and is the live and vital member of many of them. At the meetings of the Boston Woman's Civic Club no one is more interested and no one poses more searching quest ons or goes to the root of things more than Mrs Murray.

"The Governor's wife," John C Lee of Wellesley Hills, "is a credit to wealth and leisure, but she is a credit to all of it all her own. She is a leader in all her interests, a worker in movements that are for the uplifting of humanity, and one of the directors who is most taken from Mr Wilson's book is Mrs Lee's better half."

WIDER SPHERE.

"Do you not see that our young women are moving in the same wider sphere that modern women in other lines are making new of their lives? Not that the pleasures of life and the home are not toward the right ideals—I suppose growth—but of course, the war, too, has given a broadened outlook, developmental growth to women.

"I have often heard it said, I think," declared Mr Lee, "that for it is making happier marriages, more successful partnerships, bringing the home more closely.

"You don't see so often now," she laughed "the husband enveloped in his paper. He also passes politics, the war and even the business with his wife—and he finds her a help, too—and sometimes tells her so."

Mrs. Dowling will be a delegate at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs convening Thursday in Lynn for a two days' session. Apropos of her belief that many women are becoming active in the larger interests of women's clubs, she says she to meet there Mrs Lou M Keene, who is a splendid example of the argument.

Mrs. Keene of the Lynn Shore Drive, is widely known for her activities not in women's organizations, as she once was so prominent in the social affairs of the North Shore.

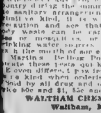
MANY OTHERS JOIN.

"And," said Mrs Dowling, "there are many, many others, with the same fine equipment joining the ever-increasing onward movement of the women of the world."

Seven million women linked in world tasks are to be reckoned with. Organized womanhood has become the figure of the General Federation of Women's clubs. The Federation, in joining the International Council of Women, of which Lady Aberdeen is president, has allied itself with seven million women, representing the women's organizations of all the civilized countries. It has linked itself with the women's clubs of Christendom.

Optimists expect that the enormous body of thoughtful and brilliant women will be invincible. The momentum for progress in the feminine movements will be tremendous. For many years the International Council of Women of the World has the matter of suffrage for women, but at a meeting in Rome in 1914 endorsed it."

BED BUGS AND TYPHOID FEVER



All household pests are dangerous to the health—some of them are more dangerous than others. Bed bugs are known to spread typhoid fever. Some affected often carry the disease in their saliva for some days after recovery. When there are no typhoid germs in the body there is no typhoid. I have found that bedbugs first and mosquitoes second, ask you to destroy all which comes into a house where there is typhoid fever. Typhoid fever is the only disease that causes it in the body of someone who has or has had typhoid and that the germs in the body of the typhoid patient must get out of the utmost importance that all water coming from the body be disposed of with the greatest care. All bugs are the greatest pests into the country during the summer months, where sanitary conditions are not of a quality like, it is well to take every precaution and see that no germs from body waste can be carried by cockroaches or mosquitoes or be scattered into drinking water sources so that they can get in the mouth of man or his fellow creatures. Bedbug Powders will exterminate bedbugs quickly and surely. Exterminating powders for other pests, as fleas when dogs are troubled with them. Used by all dogs and in pet owners' stores who sell them. 25c and $1.00 by mail.

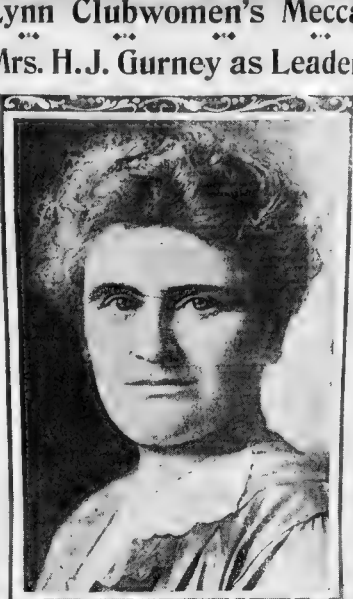
Lynn Clubwomen's Mecca Mrs. H.J. Gurney as Leader



Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, whose name will be presented by the nominating committee for president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

All eyes are turned to Lynn this week. On Thursday morning at 9.15 the special train will leave the North station crowded with clubwomen who will attend the two days' session of the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

At 10.30 o'clock Mrs. George Winslow Perkins, the president, will call to order the first assembly in the Universalist Church, Nahant street.

Added interest and even excitement is given this meeting by the news that Mrs. Percy Pennybacker, the past president of the General Federation, will be the guest of the federation. Mrs. Pennybacker's influence among clubwomen is so vibrant that her presence will be an inspiration, and greater brilliance will be given all social functions.

The hostess clubs, the eight federated clubs of Lynn, will entertain on Thursday evening at a musicale, and on Friday evening a reception will be held in honor of their guests.

Until it became known that Mrs Pennybacker was to attend the convention, the all-important topic was the election. Since the meeting of a year ago at Marion, when suffrage was the prime interest and the Federation was put on record as a suffrage organization (with a vote of 203 to 99) the clubs have been a little at variance and often sadly divided against themselves.

When important matters have come up for consideration it has been impossible for those who resented the invasion of the burning subject of Equal Rights at Marion to forget it and in consequence the crossing of the swords of the opposing creeds has been constant and enduring. It is wondered if Mrs Pennybacker's presence will call a truce in the family quarrel and if the Massachusetts clubwomen will come to the Lynn meeting with their "company manners" on and for the time at least wave the white flag.

The nominating committee will present the name of Mrs Herbert J Gurney of the Quincy Woman's Club for president, to succeed Mrs Perkins, who has served two years.

Vice-presidents—Mrs Charles U. Gibson, Wellesley Hills Woman's Club; Mrs. Royal Whitten, Dorchester Woman's Club; Mrs. Arthur A. Hibbard Milton Woman's Club; Mrs. George M Baker, Concord Woman's Club.

Clerk—Mrs. Frank B. Haley, Cambridge Civic League.

Assistant clerk—Mrs. Fred Richards Loftin, Warren Woman's Club.

Corresponding secretary—Mrs. Arthur W Lane, Auburndale Woman's Club.

Treasurer—Mrs. Lena B. Wellington, Forbes Hill Club, Winchester.

Directors for three years—Mrs. Adelaide M Redding, New Hampshire Daughters, Boston; Mrs. Cyrus Dallin, Arlington Woman's Club; Mrs. Walter G. Newell, West Roxbury Woman's Club; Mrs. Helen M. Bowers, Canton Woman's Club; Mrs. Ashley Watson, Dedham Club, Amherst.

Nominating committee—1916 1917 Mrs. Edgar Chapman, Medford Woman's Club, Mrs. J. H. Estes, Hanover Woman's Club; Mrs. Arba F. Bowers, Winthrop Woman's Club; Mrs. Charles H. Adams, Jamaica Plain Tuesday Club; Mrs. Neal Barney, Salem Woman's Club.

There will be a morning and afternoon session each day and the business will include the annual reports of officers and chairmen of committees, reports of the biennial amendments to the by-laws and the election of officers.

Polls will be open for the election of officers from noon to 5 p. m. on Thursday. Headquarters will be at the Ocean House, Swampscott, and special cars will carry the club women back and forth between the hotel and church.

SAGAMORE TO HEAR EXPERTS IN INDUSTRY

Eighth Annual Sociological Conference Will Open on June 27.

In accordance with a custom of eight years' standing, invitations have been issued for the Sagamore Sociological conference which is to be held at Sagamore Beach, Cape Cod, June 27, 28 and 29.

This is the ninth session of the conference, which is unique in that all who attend are invited guests of the hosts from the time of their arrival to the hour of departure.

In accordance with the suggestion made at the last conference, the programs of the next two or three years will be devoted to the creation of a spirit of brotherhood between business men and working men, social workers and reformers, and many prominent persons will be in attendance this year.

The number of hosts for the conference this year is more than double that of any preceding year, and they are as follows:

George W. Coleman, Boston, chairman, John B. Allen, J. J. Arakelyan, Roger W. Babson, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mr. Leslie C. Bruce, Philip W. Carter, F. Preston Clark, Francis S. Cobb, William F. Cochran, Henry B. Dewson, Professor Edward B. Hawes, Ph. D., Mrs. Jessie D. Hodder, William J. Hogarty, Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins, Mrs. Mary Morton Kehew, Henry P. Kendall, Charles Kroll, Rev. E. E. Sandmeier, Charles G. Schirmer, Fred P. Squire, Dr. James P. Warbasse, Miss Lucy C. Warren, H. A. Wilder, Mrs. Laura C. Williams.

The officers are George W. Coleman, president; Arthur J. Crockett, secretary, Rev. Samuel Lane Loomis, historian.

The program of the conference will be:

"The Solution of Industrial and International Troubles," Roger W. Babson, president of Babson's Statistical Organization, Wellesley Hills.

"Personal Relationship in Business Administration," by Richard A. Feiss, general manager, the Clothcraft Shops of the Joseph & Feiss Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

"Advanced Requirements of Modern Industry," by F. C. Henderschott, of the New York Edison Company and Executive Secretary of the National Association of Corporation Schools, New York.

"Forward to First Principles," by Louis D. Post, Assistant Secretary of Labor, Washington.

While everyone is welcome to attend the sessions of the conference, only the specially invited guests will be able to find accommodation at the hotels; but for the Open Forum Council on June 30, there will be ample accommodation.

On Friday, June 30, the day following the conference, there will be a gathering of those interested in the open forum movement.

The vital feature of the Sagamore Sociological Conferences is the open discussion from the floor after each address at every session, in which every one present is welcome to participate.

DEATHS DECREASE FOR BOSTON WEEK

There were 203 deaths in Boston last week, a decrease of 24 deaths over the corresponding week last year, according to a bulletin of the Health Department issued last night.

COMMUNION DAY FOR CIVIC LEAGUE

The Catholic Italian Civic League of the West End will attend mass and receive Holy Communion this morning in St Joseph's Church.

After the mass there will be a breakfast at the American House and a reception in honor of Rt. Rev. Monsignor Splaine, D D and the Rev Francis W. Malley, rector of St Joseph's.

DOVER STREET MISSION FUND

The $100,000 campaign [illegible] for the Dover Street Mission has passed the third of the allotted ten days with an average collection of ten thousand dollars for each twenty-four hours.

At the noon luncheon Friday the grand total reached $71,400 odd. Reports of what was collected yesterday will not be given until Monday noon.

Great enthusiasm prevailed at each of the noon luncheons at Ford Hall, where two or three hundred team captains with members of their teams assembled to listen to speeches and to report collections.

On the tables occupied by the teams that received pledges for the largest amounts two large American flags were placed.

Friday saw both floors on the women's side of the room, but when the days proceeds were announced, the national emblems were transferred to the men's tables. The women however, maintain that Monday will see the flags back where they say, they belong.

At each luncheon [illegible] have been given by men who date their rearise from a time when they strayed into the Dover Street Mission.

300 Blossoms in Big Bouquet Made by an Inmate of Prison

As a mark of appreciation for his work in ma[illegible] the Easter

Fred W. Dresser and bouquet of 36 kinds of artificial flowers made by an inmate of Charlestown State Prison.

of the Easter artificial floral decorations on the altar of the State Prison chapel. Fred W. Dresser, Boston AMERICAN photographer, has been presented with a bouquet made of these flowers by a prisoner.

There are 300 blossoms in the huge bouquet of thirty-six distinct kinds of flowers and so true are they to nature that when Chaplain W. Peabody Whitney walked into the AMERICAN office with them some of the reporters mistook him for a wedding guest.

The prisoner who made the flowers devoted several months to the work, assisted at times by other prisoners. There were 5,000 blossoms in the altar decorations, the most elaborate display ever seen at the prison. The flower man does not use colored paper, but white tissue, which he tints upon completion. He is helped in disposing of his wares by Chaplain Whitney and Father Murphy.

Editor Willcox Calls 15 Cents Free Admission

City Hall employes are having a laugh at the expense of Editor Stanley Willcox of the City Record and incidentally are wondering at Editor Willcox's definition of "free."

The laugh was started when there appeared in the City Record the following heading:

"BOSTON'S FREE RECREATION [illegible]"

And then right underneath appeared the following:

"The Swimming Pools. ADMISSION 15 CENTS."

And now everyone is asking whether Editor Willcox considers 15 cents "free admission."

The All-New England Baby Contest is now [illegible] weekly. A search over all [illegible] reading gratifying results, and if the very best of all babies has been found, scores of splendid [illegible] have arrived.

Photographs already received in the Best Babies Editor, compare favorably with anything sent from the Greater Boston district.

Until June 17 the AMERICAN will be on the hunt for the best baby in each State. No effort is to be spared to attract all the precious darlings from homesteads, from [illegible] resorts, towns and cities.

For the finest baby in all New England there is a special [illegible] trip. OUTING OF BAY STATE MOTORISTS

NUMEROUS PRIZES

Sports of all Kinds Will Be Enjoyed by Men and Women Alike.

The annual outing of the Bay State Automobile Association to Pond Friday, Saturday and Sunday next at Lake Spofford, New Hampshire.

These outings of the Bay State long ago became one of the big events of the year, most enjoyable and so successful have they proven that they have earned for themselves national reputation and great attention and guests from all over the country.

It is, per se, the social event of the year when the association gets together in a real fine way, when the wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts of the members are privileged to enjoy equal rights with the members. That they do enjoy them in abundance goes without interest exhibited.

Already more than 200 guests have signified their intention of being present. The party will leave Boston at about noon Friday, next, arriving at the Lake Spofford Hotel in season for dinner at 6:30. Dancing will follow.

Saturday there will be all kinds of sports—a ball game between the Mutts and Jeffs, a golf tournament, putting and driving contests in which both ladies and gentlemen will take part with prizes for each sex, a tennis tournament, bowling, gymkhana games both for ladies and gentlemen, and, for the less actively inclined a bridge whist tournament.

In the evening there will be a banquet at which there will be novel favors followed by the annual dance of the club. At the banquet will take place the drawing of the lucky prizes, at which the $50 cash prize presented by the Hotel Lenox will be awarded. This is to be divided equally into two prizes, one for a man and the other for a woman. Each ticket to the outing bears a number, and at the dinner all the numbers will be placed in a box and the two drawn out will get the money.

Sunday morning will be given over to boating and golf, and after luncheon the party will start for home.

The motor trade have been exceedingly generous in presenting prizes for the events, donations having been made by John A. Arthur, Hill & Hill, Splitdorf Electrical Company, Pennsylvania Tire Company, Goodrich Tire Company, Firestone Tire Company, Fisk Rubber Company, Brophy Barrabee Company, Goodyear Tire Company, United States Tire Company, Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, A. SHOULD DISCARD DISCOLORED BULBS

When lighting bulbs become badly discolored it is best to install new bulbs using the old ones as emergency lamps. When a bulb becomes gray, black or yellow in color its value as a good one are cut down so much that current is actually wasted. While this waste may not be large, there is no need of allowing it to continue. While on the subject of bulbs the motorist should always remember to carry a few extra bulbs, whenever a tour of any length is to be made. Sometimes the roadside shop is not stocked with the bulb you may need. Suitable bulb carriers may be purchased at any large supply store or from the bulb makers.

WRENCHES NEED REPAIRS.

When wrench jaws start to show signs of wear the owner should have the jaws rehardened. Any blacksmith can case-harden the jaws in a few minutes at little cost.

Trend Toward Lower Shields with or Without Rake on the Newest Cars—Now Built In and Not Tacked On Later.

By MERLE SHEPARD

A broken cup on a well-set table, a cheap [illegible] of a collection of oil paintings, do not come as more of a shock than a beautifully made automobile body touched off with an [illegible] windshield. The jarring note sounds the whole harmony of the [illegible] but while the bad effect is created, it is sometimes difficult to put your finger on the exact spot where the beautiful body is spoiled.

No other accessories or fittings can make or break the [illegible] appearance of the car so much as the windshield. It is the final touch that carries out the whole idea of the designer and, like the frame of a picture, it must coincide or a masterpiece of design can be lost. With all its importance as an ornament it must fulfil its useful purposes efficiently. It must do its work and be a source of comfort and not of hindrance to the occupants of the car.

May 5—Los Angeles to Williams, Ariz.—[illegible] desert—tires hot, [illegible]

May 6—Ash Fork, Ariz., to Albuquerque, N. M.—[illegible] and bad in spots, one very fine and some very poor—very hot.

May 10—Santa Fe, N. M., to Ponca City, Kans.—647.2 miles. A few miles of mountainous road in New Mexico, and the rest of the journey very good—moderately warm.

May 11—Dodge City, Kansas, to Kansas City, Mo.—606 miles. Very fine roads to within fifty miles of Kansas City, when we struck some mud—cold.

May 12—Kansas City to St. Louis, Mo.—278 miles. Very fine roads all the way—[illegible] with rain.

May 13—St. Louis, Mo., to Pittsburgh, Pa.—[illegible] miles. Roads [illegible] within a few miles of Pittsburgh, when [illegible] rain into Pittsburgh [illegible] roads.

May 14—Pittsburgh, Pa., to New York City—[illegible] miles. Muddy [illegible] through [illegible] roads into Pittsburgh. [illegible] New York.

From this it will be seen that the total distance is 3,371.8 miles. The first announcement of 3,471 miles rushed out just as the trip was completed, was 100 miles in error. The average run per day was 480 miles, and the average daily running time was 17 hours. [illegible] of actual running [illegible] age per hour was 19.8 miles. [illegible] daily and [illegible] a big [illegible] been much [illegible] but for the bad going across Missouri. [illegible] number of [illegible] gallon of gasoline was 8¼ with 500 to 570 miles per gallon of lubricating oil.

Baker drove the car the entire distance. The car travelled the entire distance under its own power, except when pulled out of a ditch or bore and twice over railroad tracks, at once near Bonneville, Md., and of course, except when ferried across rivers. Baker says he did not clean a spark plug during the entire trip. One day he drove a stretch of eighty-four miles through such heavy roads that high speed was impossible. At another time the road was so poor that two hours were required to make ten miles.

Empire Tires RED WEAR LONGEST

This settles the question every motorist asks—"which tire gives me most for my money?" By first cost is always a poor way to judge a purchase. Empire Reds are not the highest-priced tires nor the lowest for initial cost. But in actual mileage produced you are losing money every mile you run unless your tires are Empire Reds.

This is tangible evidence of red rubber's superiority over any tire material yet produced.

Equip your car with Empire Red Tires and share the savings other motorists are getting. Adjustments on the 5,000-mile basis.

Six $1145

45 horsepower 125-in. wheelbase — 7 passenger 35" x 4 1/2" tires — f. o. b. Toledo

Production and Price

Let's reason it out.

What controls price? Production.

As a manufacturer's production increases, his production cost, per car, decreases.

Therefore the plant with the largest production is in a position to give more of everything and charge less for it.

We are the world's largest producers of Six and Four Cylinder Automobiles.

Consequently you get in the Overland Six a larger and more powerful motor—a longer wheelbase—the convenience of electric control buttons on the steering column and an almost endless list of other comforts and refinements.

And when it comes to a Six Cylinder performance, remember the Overland Six is the star of them all.

One ride will convince you.

Second Baseman Smashes Out Single in Tenth Session and Scores Deciding Tally when Scott, in Role of Pinch Hitter, Gets a Safe Blow—10,000 St. Louis "Fans" See the Sox Halt the Browns

St. Louis, Mo., June 10. The Browns' winning streak, which had reached the munificent total of six straight was abruptly terminated by the plucky crew of the champion Red Sox in the tenth round of their opening engagement here yesterday afternoon.

When Cady tossed out Pratt for the third demise in the Browns' half of the extra session the Sox scrapped into the Sportsman's Park clubhouse with a 4 to 2 victory under their belts, and 10,000 mournful Brown "fans" sadly wended their way homeward muttering a solemn requiem.

FAME.

Sixteen years ago a regular athlete named Maxey Long ran a quarter-mile race in 47 4-5 seconds. It was a gallant performance. No man, woman or child in the written history of the world had ever equaled it. That was sixteen years ago.

In sixteen years several men have approached Maxey Long, but nobody has ever equaled him. Now comes Ted Meredith. He runs a quarter around a curve in 47 2-5 seconds.

Possibly sixteen years from now a youth from Yale, Pennsylvania or Wisconsin or Illinois or Harvard or Missouri will run the quarter in 47 1-5.

The newspapers will reveal the fact that L. Smith ran the quarter (known to the common people as the 440-yard run) one-fifth of a second faster than Ted Meredith ran it in 1916.

"Who," the public will ask, "is Ted Meredith?"

"Who, Meredith?" the expert will respond. "He's only the guy that held the record that L. Smith broke." The world loves a loser.

DUMONT HANDS WHITE SOX GAME

Chicago, June 10.—The White Sox beat Washington today, 5 to 1, with the bases filled in the ninth and two out. Pitcher Dumont hit Weaver and allowed the winning run to score.

A triple by Judge and a single by Jackson scored the visitors' first run. Wolfgang retired the box first. The summary:

Great Nags May Pace Over Eastern Course

Hal Boy and White Sox, the famous pacing rivals of the Pacific Coast region, may be campaigned along the Grand Circuit this summer. The chances are that if both horses are shipped East the bulk of the racing will be against each other, as there is intense rivalry between their owners.

Hal Boy and White Sox have met twice in special races, Honors are even. Some time in June or July a special $5,000 race between the two will be run, either on one of the Grand Circuit tracks or in Chicago, in case the horses are not shipped to Eastern tracks.

3 BOATS RACE IN STORM

Marblehead, June 10.—Only three boats responded to the starting gun for the first North Shore championship regatta, which was scheduled to be held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Corinthian Yacht Club, off Marblehead. The fleet of starters was driven in the main to the northeast gale, which blew into the harbor.

The Wasaka II. and the Ahmeek were the only boats which attempted a race against such unseasonable weather in the P class, while the Huskie, of the R class, struggled over a short course without any competition.

CLOSE RACE AT START.

The Wasaka II.-Ahmeek race gave every indication of being a real battle between the two boats from the start. Under the existing conditions both boats carried too much sail, while trying to round the mark.

The jockeying for the position of advantage at the start was won by Wasaka II. under her lee and held her there when they swung around the line.

The Ahmeek, not being long enough to get way from under, when the port tack the Ahmeek buckled and forced the Adams boat to a standstill from the race.

When the Ahmeek withdrew, the Corinthian Yacht Club regatta committee notified the Wasaka II that the course would be changed to include the former Josephine to sail out to the mid-channel buoy and return.

HUSKIE RACES ALONE.

Three minutes after the 1[illegible] boats had been started, the Huskie sailed across the starting line for her uncontested race over the short inside course.

The victories of the Wasaka II and the Huskie gain a strong boost in the 100 per cent. toward the North shore championships.

GALA CELEBRATION MARKS OPENING OF LYNN YACHT CLUB

Lynn, June 10.—Weather conditions failed to put a check on the forty-fourth annual opening of the Lynn Yacht Club and the celebration of the enlargement of the [illegible] which have been held yesterday afternoon at the Lynn Yacht Club.

More than 2,000 persons [illegible] were present [illegible] Governor George D. Newhall of Lynn, George L. Rogers, secretary of the Metropolitan District Commission, Rear Admiral Comdt. of the Yacht Racing Union of Massachusetts, John H. Cogswell, Boston; Mrs. Comel, Bailey & Gray, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Hon. William A. Newell, the chairman of the Harbor and Land Commission.

GETS PURSE OF GOLD.

During the [illegible] commission of the Lynn Yacht Club was the presentation of a purse of gold to John H. Cogswell from Lachmann & Lynn, who took this means of showing their appreciation on the work he did in causing the Harbor and Land Commission to make an appropriation for the dredging of the basin.

The celebration was opened by a concert by Lee's City Band, and the [illegible] followed.

At 4 o'clock the Lynn Yacht Club [illegible] into commission, when the club salutes were tendered to the ensign of the house and fleet, to Commodore Lincoln R. Coffin, Vice-Commodores Leonard L. De Veau and to Past Captain C. H. Hilton. The commodore salute was given from the flagship "Brownie," while the vice-commodore saluted from the flagship Comfort, and the fleet captain salute came from the Aurora.

SUCH PRAISE FOR HOUGHTON.

The saluting was followed by dancing on the pavilion and the celebration closed with the sunset gun.

Although he has ranked for years among the leading golfers of the country in Massachusetts Bay, Joseph D. Houghton, chairman of the Handicap Committee of the Lynn Yacht Club eclipsed anything he has ever done in the eyes of those who attended the [illegible] celebration.

Newark, N. J., June 10.—The National Interscholastic track and field championship, which was to have been held here this afternoon as part of the 250th anniversary celebration, was postponed until June 24, on account of wet grounds.

GRISCOM CUP FOR N. Y.

Gotham Women Win Final Matches from Boston Players. Score 11 Points in Day.

Manchester, Mass., June 10.—New York won the final match for the Griscom Cup today at the Essex Country Club, by defeating Boston in one of the hardest fought and most interesting contests ever played for the trophy. New York scored eleven points, six in the singles played this forenoon and five of the foursomes which were played this afternoon.

Boston, on the other hand, was leading after the single matches had been concluded, by taking nine of the [illegible] points. But this afternoon the tied down badly when the opponents succeeded there to win five of the foursome matches, and scored seven points for the day's play.

The chief point winners this morning for Boston were Miss Mary Ann Ryan, Miss Elizabeth Cassidy, Miss Alice Sargent and Miss M. D. Pierce. This afternoon Mrs Rogers and Miss Sargent were the pair to win for the Boston combination.

They defeated Miss [illegible] Mrs Swift at the 14th hole [illegible] Miss Morgan and Mrs. Lovell of New York were the pair to win [illegible] the 12th hole, Mrs. Morgan and Miss Hitchborn and Miss Dutton the 18th hole, Mrs. Morgan and Miss Hitchborn being the pair to win for the Boston combination.

ELI ROWS FASTER TRIAL

New Haven Oarsmen Better Crimson's Time by Ten Seconds; Honors About Even, However.

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 10.—Yale and Harvard oarsmen have closed their first week of rowing on the Thames with only short try-outs.

Both 'varsity eights have covered the four mile course at top speed in efforts to establish their best form within two days. Last night [illegible] and Yale [illegible] honors about even. [illegible] Yale in the faster time, [illegible] seconds to 20 minutes for [illegible] Harvard. Faster conditions [illegible]

For Yale, however, the time was fully satisfactory, as it proved that the eight can get together for a fast trial.

Since the crew slumped so badly at the race in Ithaca with Cornell and Pennsylvania, the coaches have been doubtful of its ability to attain the form displayed by the Blues of the last two seasons, and a mark of 20 minutes in seconds for the four miles in the first attempt is considered to get back the speed as a form, was [illegible]

EVENLY BALANCED

The second time trials indicated that the two crews are again evenly balanced and that the changes which were made by Tim Nicholls the past week have been the making of an eight with possibilities as great as any of the two which he coached to victories in the past.

They indicated, also, that few changes are now looked for in either the Yale or Harvard [illegible]

OUIMET TO COMETE AS AMATEUR IN BIG GOLF TOURNEY

Crack Thoroughbreds Ready for Annual Race Meeting of the Brookline Country Club--Two Feature Stakes Listed

B. C. NINE CAUSES STIR

Defeat of Crimson Raises Questions Can Maroon and Gold Repeat on Friday?

The Boston College baseball team, which caused a stir in college circles by defeating the crack Harvard team, will close its season with four games this week

The Maroon and Gold will play two games with Holy Cross, the first at Fenway Park tomorrow and the second at Flitton Field, Worcester, Wednesday.

On Tuesday the Varsity will line up against the Alumni in a game that promises to be a hummer The Alumni have enlisted the services of Buck Harrington, the old Boston College and Pittsburg National star as moundsman In addition they will have other such stars as Charlie Mahoney, Steven Mahoney, Tom Burke, Jim Linehan and others

The Boston College team will wind up its season in another clash with Harvard at University Heights, Friday. This will be probably the banner games of the year, as Coach Fred Mitchell's charges are anxious to square themselves for the trouncing which Bill Sweeney's men handed them Wednesday

MAHAN TO PITCH.

Eddie Mahan is slated to hurl for the Crimson and Rob Gill, the freshman southpaw who proved such a puzzle to Harvard batsmen, will probably pitch for the Maroon and Gold.

Coach Bill Sweeney, the former Brave captain, is largely responsible for the success of Boston College on the diamond this year.

The work of both the infield and outfield has caused favorable criticism. All but two men have averages of over .300.

GILLS TO CLASH.

The two Gills are not related, but were teammates at Boston College High for three years and were largely responsible for B C H winning the Greater Boston championship for the three seasons.

Ed Gill is a right-hander, while Bob is a southpaw. Holy Cross has won the annual game for the past three years, and Boston College men, with the best baseball team in the college, are rooting hard for their team.

Bike Classic on Revere Card Wednesday

Rain yesterday again interfered with the races scheduled for the Revere Cycle Track This is the fourth Saturday in succession that the beach events have been postponed.

Realizing as early as eleven o'clock yesterday that it would be impossible to stage the meet, Manager Ned Burdett promptly called it off and at the same time announced that the big competition would be held on Wednesday evening, with the Brassard race featuring the card

The brassard race, which is a one-hour contest behind motor-pacing, is one of the classics of cyclingdom. It is envied by all cyclists, for it not only entitles the winner to the shield, but $5 a day as well until he is beaten in a similar contest.

This year's Brassard race will have four contestants, namely: George Wiley of Syracuse, N. Y.; Lorenzo Carman of Jamaica, L. I.; Victor Linart of Antwerp, Belgium, and Georges Seres of Paris.

The ability of this quartet of flyers is well known. While Linart and Carman have all held the Brassard at one time or another, Seres, while never winning the prize in this country, has held it abroad, where he defeated some of the fastest field of riders.

The meet scheduled for last night will be staged on some later date.

HERE'S A GOLF BAG THAT'S WORTH $1,000

L. B Fennor, of Burwell, Neb., owns the costliest golf bag in the world.

He went hunting in Central Africa last Winter and returned with a baby alligator He shipped the hide North with instructions to have it converted into a caddie bag. A few days later he got a letter from the sporting goods house telling him the hide was that of a pearl alligator, a rare species, and that it was worth close to $1,000

"What shall we do?" asked the golf bag makers.

"Make me the bag as requested," wrote back Fennor. And they did.

ANDOVER GRIDIRON CARD

Andover, June 10.—Phillips Andover's football schedule for next Fall includes one more game than was played last year. The Harvard seconds are the new foe The card:

October 7, Cushing Academy at Andover; 14, Harvard freshmen at Cambridge; 21 Dartmouth freshmen at Andover; 28, Worcester Academy at Andover; November 4, Yale freshmen at New Haven; 10, Harvard seconds at Andover; 18, Exeter at Andover.

Rochester "Pro" Will Surely Compete in Massachusetts Open at Brae BurnThis Week.

What is unquestionably the best golf offering for the year for devotees of the ancient game is scheduled for Thursday and Friday next, at the Brae-Burn Country Club, West Newton. On those days the leading professional and amateur golfers of this and other districts will compete in the annual open championship meeting of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

For as the Massachusetts association decided on what many consider a radical departure, that was the opening up of the event so that golfers from any section of the country were eligible to compete. The result was an entry list which brought the event up almost to a par with a National title hunt.

Now result is as the winning of the title honors by Walter Hagen of Rochester, N. Y., a former National champion. The event was easily the greatest Massachusetts golf had seen the memorable encounter in which Francis Ouimet showed Harry Vardon and Ted Ray the way home.

36 HOLES DAILY.

The year's entry list includes the names of practically all the stars who competed a year ago and in addition the others who did not. Conditions call for thirty-six holes to be played on each day, the maker of the low aggregate score to win the title and the money. In event of there being a tie at the end of 72 holes, one round of 18 holes will be played on the evening of June 17 to settle the issue.

In addition to the gold medal the first three winner receives $150; second, $100; third, $70; fourth, $60; fifth, $50; sixth, $20, seventh, $10, and eighth, $5 Should an amateur finish in any of these places he will receive a suitable trophy in place

The committee has decided that all the money involved will be given to professionals and amateur scores will in no way interfere with the awards.

This tournament will mark the first public appearance this year of Francis Ouimet the most talked of golfer in the country Ouimet will play strictly as an amateur, regardless of what interpretation some members of golf men inclined to place on his status. Now as Massachusetts Ouimet is an amateur, and as such he will play in the big title hunt.

Ouimet has been going great guns thus far this season and if he starts at Brae-Burn there is no question but what he will finish right up at the top with the leaders. His work from the tees has been the best in his golfing history, and through the fairway he is going even better on the whole his game is of such calibre as to make him one of the favorites for the honor

J. Ward has come from Rochester that Walter Hagen will surely be on hand to defend the laurels he won a year ago after a stiff fight with Mike Brady, the Oakley professional. Hagen played golf all Winter, either indoors or in the South, and has been at the game since the opening of the season this Spring As a result he is in tip-top condition and ready for any sort of opposition

In addition to Hagen the other visitors will include Tommy Kerrigan of Siwanoy, N. Y., better known through his connections at Dedham, Charles Hoffner of Woodbury, Ct.; Tom McNamara, now connected with the New York golf concern, Gil McNeilly, well known to Massachusetts followers of the sport, Pat Doyle, formerly of Myopia; Alec Smith, a former National champion; Jim Barnes, the big hitter from Whitemarsh Valley, Wilfred Reid of Wilmington and several others.

BRADY TOPS HOME BREDS.

Mike Brady will lead the Massachusetts delegation and will make strenuous effort to retain the crown he lost a year ago. With him will be Louis Tellier, the diminutive Frenchman, now at the Country Club; Matt Campbell and "Skip" Wogan of Essex County; Charles Burgess and Harry Burgess of Woodland, George Bowden of Tedesco, Harry Bowler of Brookline, Jack Dunn of Brookline, James Kays of Wollaston, Chris McSorley of Worcester, G. L. Murphy of Salem and J. J. Gordon of Rhode Island

Among the leading amateurs who will compete are John G Anderson, low captain at Siwanoy and an active member of Brae-Burn; Jess Guilford, Charles Skehens, Jack Sullivan, Paul Tewksbury, G. H Pastre, L. B. Paton, F. W. Small, P. W. Whittmore, L. J. Malone, J. W Travis and W. E. Smith.

Guilford has been going good all Spring, as shown by the fact that he with Tewksbury and Sullivan have won all the open tournaments played in the State to date. The amateurs are bound to figure big in the event and it would not be at all surprising if some one of them finished right at the head of the list.

COMES IN FIVE SHAPE

Brae-Burn is in perfect condition for the event. The recent rains have helped materially and in the practice tests to come it is indeed difficult for one to decide on just who can win. It would appear as though the fight among the professionals rests between Hagen, Brady, McNamara, Barnes and Tellier.

The event was played at Brae-Burn three years ago and on that occasion Tom McNamara won the title after a playoff with Mike Brady. He scored a 72 in the last round of the championship propet, and that mark still stands as the course record.

For the first time since the event was first contested, Aleck Ross will not be in He has left Massachusetts and gone West. He was a five time winner of the honor between the years of 1906-1910. His brother Donald, who twice won the honors, will not compete.

Brady won the event in 1914 and the preceding year McNamara won it from him after an extra round of 18 holes. Hagen won last year.

DISTURBER IV. TO RACE ACROSS LAKE

Chicago, June 10.—Secretary Frank Wever of the Columbia Yacht Club regatta committee announced today that Commodore James A. Pugh had consented to go out after the record from here to Michigan City on June 17. The attempt will be made in the Disturber IV.

The attempt can be made only if there is fairly smooth water as it would be useless to try to make time in a heavy sea. Given a calm lake and its full speed, Disturber IV. will make the trip across the water in considerably less than an hour. This will be faster than it can be made any other way except by aeroplane.

2 DAYS OF BIG GO AT RACING HERE

Big Meet Opens Over the Country Club Course Next Thursday and Continues Saturday.

At 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, over the greensward at Clyde Park, the bustle call familiar to the ears of all followers of the sport of kings, "Boots and Saddles," will float out and the annual race meet in, of the Brookline Country Club will be on.

On Thursday five events are carded and on the second day of the meeting, Saturday, six will be contested. Practically all of the horses that have started at the big hunt meetings in New York and vicinity will be on hand and in addition others that haven't started down in that vicinity.

FIVE RACES FOR AN OPENER.

While every race on the card might be called a big one, the chief events are the Chamblet Memorial and Country Club Grand Annual Steeplechases.

In these two classics the best timber-toppers owned by persons who go into sport for sport's sake will start. On form the race for the Memorial Barry Mahotte, shows the best in each, and considering that is a good jumping course, the race of a year ago it would seem as though he were right slyly favored

TWO GOOD FEATURE STAKES.

Thursday's program opens with a flat race for hacks and hunters at one mile and a sixteenth. A Ludlow Kfar race, a jumping contest, is in the second on the card. Then comes the first steeplechase with Posnall Keene starting Toreador and Twenty-one.

Next in order is the Chamblet Memorial, in which, in addition to Cherry Mahotte, Mrs. Whitney will start the imported Jumper, Ben Wyvis and Nanuphar.

Mrs. Ambrose Clark starts Hibbler in this race and with Jona Ashburn, from Glen Riddle farms stable, a dangerous combination is provided

TWO GOOD DAYS OF RACING.

The Peridot, a seven furlong dash, is next, with such good performers as Ahir and Dick set entered to start. The race is the Myopia Hunt Cup, with fourteen nominated to go. The Chamblet has eighteen nominations and the Challenge Cup nine.

The fields on Saturday are practically the same with one or two additional starters in the jumping races.

Mike Glover and Ted Lewis Will Make 142 Pounds for Battle Tuesday Night.

Claiming the honors in a favorite pastime of the present day fighters, but few ever display a desire to [illegible] championship matches The [illegible] amongst the welterweight division as shared by many and who is the rightful holder of the title today is as much a mystery as it became after the passing of the local favorites, Honey Mellody and Joe Wolcott.

Until some honest soul can win the fights impartially, there is room for doubt; live up to all the requirements made for a championship match then and only then will that particular individual have a right to the championship

Last week at the Armory A. A. Mike O'Dowd met Jack Britton in a bout that bordered on championship aspect. The polish was rubber of this meeting when the facts become known that they were fighting at 147 pounds. The welterweight mark, 142 pounds, is the legitimate class mark and will be boxed for between Mike Glover of South Boston and Ted Kid Lewis of England at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night.

Britton's claim to the championship while good can be discounted by those of Mike O'Dowd, Ted Lewis [illegible] of the British [illegible] the defeat of Lewis [illegible] regular bouncing and all he [illegible] live up to as the champion of the class.

As a matter of fact Mike Glover's claim to the title is much stronger than Britton's or anybody else for that matter. But like Jack Britton, man desires to establish a better claim to the championship before he claims it.

With Glover meets Lewis at the Three A. C. club Tuesday night the [illegible] of the match is [illegible] ing a Lewis win from [illegible] The fact that they have [illegible] defeated [illegible] who may [illegible] championship will [illegible] to establish the [illegible] on a par [illegible] championship holder

Mike Glover claims no championships but what he does claim is that his right to the title is just as good as is claimed by some others claiming the championship and holding it is a different picture with Glover.

The local man has defeated by far greater men than either Britton or Lewis ever have and added to his undoubted prestige to championship honors and until he defends them all there will be accept the distinction of champion.

The meeting Tuesday night parallels her boilermaker Rocks are wonderfully clever boxers, can punch and have the best points of the game at their command from first to last.

Glover already has defeated Lewis, but whether he can do it again is something that will be known only in the ring next week. The local man has the edge He has had a good long rest being better than he ever has in his life and is prepared to enter the ring Tuesday night ready to fight the hardest kind of a battle.

Lewis, though, the hardest hitting lightweight shown in Boston in a long time, will enter the ring Tuesday in favor of Mailen in the eight-round professional bout in the six-round bouts Arthur McDonald, examateur, meets Young Simons of Worcester, and Freddie Rowe, a Worcester bantamweight, in the night's sport in a six-round bout with Teddy Murphy.

Bought Racer for $120; May Reap Rich Harvest

Sometimes it pays to take a chance. Captain David Shaw of Cleveland took a chance on buying a green trotting and pacing trotter, last Winter and it seems now that he will reap a rich reward

Prince Loree, son of Ellorer, was by [illegible] Walter Cox of Peter II A year or so he was injured—seemingly [illegible] of permanent nature. Cox sold the horse at auction last Fall for $30. The Pastime stables of Cleveland, which bought him, named Prince Loree along for a while, but secured no results. Soon they turned him over to Al Pennock, also of Cleveland, for $50.

What happened to see the limping racer one day, figured that he could cure him of his ailment and put in a bid for him. Pennock asked for something like $200 at first but Shaw finally obtained him to $120.—and got the horse.

Prince Loree was treated for a month or so in the Shaw stables under the direction of his owner. He was carefully rubbed and doctored The injury finally disappeared and then Shaw gave the one-time cripple a mild workout over a quarter mile stretch. Prince Loree covered the distance in 34 4-5, which is remarkably fast time for so early in the year.

Horsemen who have seen the Loree horse in his unlimbered workouts since feel confident he will do 2 10 or better during the business. A 2 10 trotter for $120 is a bargain, Oscar—a rare bargain indeed.

THE three important events—country runs, in which Harvard will take part next Fall, follow November 4, Cornell at Ithaca, November 11, Yale at Belmont; November 25, Intercollegiates at New Haven.

YANKEES UNCOVER STAR IN WALTERS

The Yankees apparently have picked another star in the person of Walters. The youngster was the third stringer when the season began. Then Dillhoefer was injured in a recent baseball and a while later Alexander was forced from the field of battle by an injury.

That gave Walters a chance—and he has made good with a whoop. The kid is the peppiest youngster that has been in the game for years. He has shown fine backstopping ability, has a great whip, can hit with the best of them and is a student of baseball generally.

It's a treat to watch Walters in action. He is on the alert all the time and has a brain as nimble that he frequently has outguessed the enemy and beaten them to it when they have attempted a bit of baseball trickery.

WOLVERINES MUST CUT OUT SMOKING

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 10.—Harry Tuthill, trainer of the Detroit Americans, former trainer of the West Point Cadets' football eleven, and now under contract to condition the University of Michigan candidates, has issued his first order.

He has told each member of the squad that from now until the training season ends, in November, there shall be no cigarette smoking.

HUB GIRL LOSES AT TENNIS

Mrs. Edward Raymond of New York Defeats Eleonora Sears in Final at Women's Tournament

Philadelphia, June 10.—Playing as steadily and consistently as a well oiled machine and apparently unaffected by the wet grounds or the heavy moisture-soaked balls, Mrs Edward Raymond of the West Side Tennis Club, New York, defeated Miss Eleonora Sears of Boston, this afternoon, in the final match of the annual women's national tennis tournament, staged before a large and fashionable gallery on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club at St. Martin's Green. The score was 6—3, 6—4.

Mrs. Raymond will meet Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the present national champion, in the challenge round on Monday afternoon and if she plays as well as she did today, will give the Norse girl the game of her life

Miss Sears has played much better than she did this morning and had most of the bad luck as six times the ball struck the tape on top of the net and fell back into her own court for a lost point when the peaky thing might just as well have crawled over and dropped in Mrs. Raymond's court for a sure win.

HARD FOUGHT MATCH.

After losing the first game and other own service at that, Mrs. Raymond won two love games in succession by really brilliant generalship and accurate placing, took two more games in which she allowed Miss Sears only two points to the game lost a hard fought deuce game and for the first time a love game, then captured two successive games and the set, permitting Miss Sears but a single point in each

Mrs. Raymond scored 49 points and 6 games, while Miss Sears won 15 points and 3 games.

At the start of the second set things broke badly for Mrs Raymond. Miss Sears seemed to have taken a new lease of life and was playing like the justly famous "house-a-fire" of song and story.

THRILLING FINISH.

Mrs. Raymond's deadly system began to give results only in the fourth game however, and she won it and the fifth game, putting her in the running once more. She lost the sixth game because of two shots out of bounds, and it looked as though Miss Sears, with a lead of four games to two, was sure to win the set. Mrs. Raymond kept plugging along and won the next two games, the set, the match and a hand some silver cup to put in her trophy room

The ninth game really decided the contest and it was a thriller, deuce being called four times, but Mrs Ray mond won it on [illegible] threes in the pinches and eventually emerged victorious

She scored 39 points and 6 games in this set to her opponent's 34 points and 4 games

Student System Is Blamed for Yale Failure

That Yale University is about to regain its high rank among the leading athletic colleges of the world is evident from the vigorous methods this institution is using to provide a new form of athletic management

Yale graduates, voicing their opinion through the Yale "Alumni Weekly," have pronounced the undergraduate management of sports a failure and blame it for the unsatisfactory condition of many sports

The situation has been helped a lot by the engagement of M. F Sweeney of Hill school to act as general athletic advisor. But this appointment is only preliminary to a plan to adopt some plan that will combine complete faculty supervision with a graduate manager in charge.

No feature of American college life has undergone such radical changes in the last generation as the management of undergraduate athletics. Student control did very well as long as all teams were in the nature of scrub teams and there was no general participation in athletics by the entire student body

But all that has changed with the development of competition among colleges and schools and the establishment of departments of physical education. Strangely enough Yale, usually the most progressive of institutions, has been the greatest to become a convert to the idea of graduate management

WETTYEN CHOSEN RUTGERS CAPTAIN

Howard Wettyen, who lowered the Rutgers half-mile record against Stevens, covering the distance in 1 minute 59 seconds, has been elected captain of the Rutgers track team for next year

Wettyen entered in the half-mile at the Intercollegiates, but failed to place. Rutgers loses only two veterans this year, Captain Segur and Coleman. The latter was sixth in the quarter-mile at the Intercollegiates.

SHIPS ARE RANKED IN WAR BABY LEADERS

One Boston Man Making $1,000 a Day Merely by Few Strokes of a Pen the First of Each Month

Record-Breaking Prices Call Out Almost Any Sort of Vessel and Owners Reap a Harvest

The munition makers and stock speculators are not getting all the profits. Shipping circles are developing some of the finest and fattest "war babies."

It is getting to be a common saying on the maritime set now that anything that will float is a gold mine for its owner.

For instance:

A far-sighted Bostonian recently chartered three steamers at $5,000 a month each. He has just re-chartered the three vessels at $13,000 a month each. This gives him a clean profit of $8,000 per month on each steamer or $24,000 a month in all.

All the sagacious investor has to do is to collect his $33,000 a month from his second charter party and pay $15,000 of it to the owner, putting the $24,000 balance in his own pocket.

This is a net profit of $6,000 a week, or an even $1,000 per day for every working day, including holidays.

Moreover, this double charter arrangements has TWO YEARS TO RUN.

In other words, this man is bound to clean up a total of $1,056,000 in two years, with nothing to do except collect and pay out once a month.

AT $90,000 A MONTH.

But $15,000 a month is no fancy price for a steamer in these times of war rates and risks.

The Boston steamer Newton has just been chartered for a South American voyage at $90,000 a month. It is pleasant for the owners to sit and figure how many times this rate is over the usual charter rates in times of peace for a vessel of the Newton's size.

These record-breaking high prices for the use of vessels has brought out and put to use many a boat, from coal barges up, which had been on the shelf.

Old ships, abandoned to rot in out-of-the-way places, have been re-rigged, re-painted and sold or chartered at fortune rates.

Men are getting rich on vessels which they could not have given away a few years ago. Steam yachts are being converted into merchantmen. Fishing schooners are making transatlantic voyages as freight carriers.

I getting commercial life persons point with awe to a man and say: "He's a president of a bank," or "He owns a railroad." But in shipping circles they stop with goggle-eyed envy at the man who owns or has chartered a sizable freighter.

Many years ago Charles Brewer of Boston had a bark, the Foong Suey, in the Hawaiian trade. After barks had gone out of fashion, she was sold and converted into a coal barge. A short time ago the hulk was sold for $80,000. A like sum was spent in re-rigging her, and today she is spreading her snowy canvas aloft on tall spars and earning fancy dividends for her new owners.

PLUMBER MAKES FORTUNE.

A Boston ship broker said yesterday:

"A few weeks ago I was in the market for a 5,000-ton ship to carry two loads of grain to Greece and offered $100,000 per month for a five-month charter. I tried for a week or more to get a ship, but had to give it up. Before the war a ship of the type I wanted could be built for $450,000 in any American yards, and for a great deal less in Europe. I offered a half a million for the use of a $450,000 ship for five months and could not get it."

A few years ago William B. Johnson, a Boston plumber, raised the sunken Hull liner Carolyn off Metinic Ledge, on the Maine coast, and repaired her in Boston. The cost of raising and repairing the steamer was about $80,000. Shortly after the war he received $80,000 for one trip as a fireman. After that she was chartered at a big figure to carry munitions to Archangel and finally sold for $240,000.

An Unparalleled Opportunity

5 For Five Prospective Home-Owners 5

——By Paying——

Only $300 Down, Balance $30 to $35 a Month

This is a limited offer to five prospective home-owners of the hundreds who read this offer, provided they measure up to my requirements and can live up to their obligations.

On the crest of REDLANDS ROAD, WELD ESTATE, HIGHLAND DISTRICT, WEST ROXBURY, between Manthorne Road and Willow Street, I have built twelve modern two-apartment houses during the past year—all sold each house BEFORE A STONE OF THE FOUNDATION WAS LAID, proof positive that both houses and location leave nothing to be desired.

These Houses Built of Best Material

by skilled workmen, have hot water heat, combination ranges, semi-indirect lighting fixtures, are finished in oak and selected gumwood, have colonial colonnade opening between living room and dining room, beamed ceilings, tiled sink compartment, linen closets and extra large closets in each chamber. In fact, combining all that is modern with architectural beauty, built and thought; satisfy both the wife's ideas of what a home should be, as well as a husband's pocketbook. The best proof of this is that each house was sold before it was started.

Become a Home-Owner in Restricted Community

If you are now paying $25 to $35 a month rent, trying at the same time to save enough to make an initial payment on a home, I can STOP RIGHT NOW, and, if you can satisfy me you mean business, yours is the opportunity to take advantage of a proposition never before offered in this restricted community of home-owners.

Here Is My Offer and Your Opportunity

There are only five lots remaining (the cream of this entire particular section). And on any one of these lots, containing from 5,200 feet up, I will build to your order a duplicate of any two-family house erected by me on Redlands Road, at the same prices these houses were sold last year, notwithstanding the fact that everything in the building line has advanced in price from 10% to 25% during the past year.

ON THE PAYMENT OF ONLY $300 DOWN

Balance, which will average about $35 a month, instead of rent, will be a payment on your principal, as the income from the other suite will pay all expenses. If you are paying from $25 to $35 a month now and have nothing to show for it, again I say HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

One of the most conservative banks, in the city of Boston has investigated this proposition, and, knowing the values that are in my houses, has agreed to take back a mortgage of $5,000 on each house, providing they are satisfied that the purchaser is a responsible party.

Come out today, see the houses being finished at 134 REDLANDS ROAD for the owner, talk with the owner, inspect the adjoining houses, then form your own opinion.

Remember, there are only five lots to build on, and in this case it is not first come first served, but the first one on the ground has naturally the best advantage. If you wish, telephone now Bellevue 1200, or take your chances in coming out this afternoon. Take Charles River car at Forest Hills, get off at my office, corner Centre Street and Manthorne Road. DON'T PUT OFF—COME OUT TODAY.

AN IMPORTANT JOB FOR UNCLE SAM

YOU cannot make a battleship out of pasteboard. You cannot make a nation of the material that is in Mexico.

There are millions of good, patriotic, well-meaning men and women there, but the material that makes laws, sticks to the laws and enforces obedience to them is lacking.

Uncle Sam must finish the painting job that was started in the days of Sam Houston. In those days of the Mexican war, the Stars and Stripes were spread far down to the south and out to the west, and no one would undo what was done then.

Law, prosperity, freedom from brigandage and murder, should be extended southward in the name of DUTY AND HUMANITY.

Selfish interests will urge interference in Mexico.

Other interests will oppose intervention.

Intervention and opportunity and civilization will go together into Mexico because it is inevitable. Inform yourselves as to the results of Uncle Sam's former Mexican activity before you decide as to his duty now.

You will hear men whom you respect protesting against United States intervention in Mexico. Very good men, the great Webster among them, protested against our Mexican war of long ago.

There were selfish interests asking for that war. Other selfish interests were against the war. The slave interests wanted Mexico's conquest, as it would increase the area of slave States.

Webster was sincere when he opposed the Mexican war.

Many men sincerely oppose Mexican intervention NOW, and think that Uncle Sam's duty is to sit still and watch the Mexicans murder each other and murder Americans who get in their way.

But this country, professing horror at conditions in Europe, cannot forever tolerate conditions as bad on our border.

If a European power should occasionally cross our frontier and kill a few Americans it could not be tolerated. It cannot forever be tolerated on the ground that Mexico is a little country.

To get a conception of this continent as it will be after this country shall have done its duty in Mexico, first ask yourself what the condition would be if Webster and the others had prevailed, and if the old Mexican war had not been fought.

If we had not had that war, this would be the situation:

There would be no State of California.

Where the city of San Francisco stands, there would be some Villa terrorizing, robbing and murdering poor Mexicans. An occasional Japanese boat would come in through the Golden Gate. The railroads, the universities, schools, THE WHOLE OF CIVILIZATION OF CALIFORNIA WOULD BE LACKING.

There would be no city of Los Angeles, no San Diego, no fertile regions changed by irrigation from cactus deserts.

DO YOU THINK THE UNITED STATES AND CIVILIZATION AS A WHOLE WOULD BE BETTER OFF WITHOUT CALIFORNIA — the great State that stands as a wall between our civilization and Japan?

While the politicians are trying to decide what man shall sit in the White House, Uncle Sam ought to be planning for necessary work in Mexico. To paint the Stars and Stripes as far south as the Panama Canal is work that must be done some day. It might as well be done now.

There would have been no California, if Webster had had his way—if he and other well-meaning men had been able to persuade the people of this country that they had no right to extend their civilization to the south and the west.

If we had not had the Mexican war, half a dozen States and parts of two others would be missing from our map.

Texas is a great State, with great cities, and a wonderful future. It is a State in which you might put any one of half a dozen European nations. There would be no Texas in the United States today, had there been no Mexican war.

Would any American, even if he could, undo that Mexican war against which so many good men protested "in the name of the public consciousness!"

Would any sentimentalists turn back to Mexicans and Villa and Carranza and cacti and horned toads and brigandage and barbarism, half a dozen States of this Union, hundreds of cities and towns and millions upon millions of fertile acres of useful farms?

Do you believe that Uncle Sam did a good job when he planted the Stars and Stripes on California, Texas, New Mexico, part of Colorado and on the other States that formerly were Mexican territory?. HOW CAN YOU BELIEVE THAT HE OUGHT NOT TO CONTINUE THE WORK?

Would you describe the war that created the great States and cities in our country which once were Mexican as "a war of selfish conquest"?

Just exactly what our old Mexican war did for civilization, for this country, and, above all, FOR THE MEXICANS THEMSELVES, intervention in Mexico would do now.

Free government, free education, freedom of thought, prosperity and safety would travel south with the American flag.

The flag should go and take in all the territory reaching from the Rio Grande to a strip south of the Panama canal.

For every foot of territory thus brought within the frontiers of civilization, this country would do what it has already done in Texas and California and the other States ONCE MEXICAN.

There is no talk of taking advantage of a weaker opponent when you forbid a drunken man to beat his wife. It is not pleasant to knock the drunkard down, but you do it.

There should be no talk of "a great nation like the United States oppressing weaker Mexico and taking her territory," when it is suggested that the Mexican bandits, drunk with blood and plunder, should cease their work and have civilization forced upon them, since they cannot get it for themselves.

If you would be ashamed as an individual to live your life beside a miserable hut in which women were murdered and children beaten and starved every day, you should be ashamed to have our country live permanently beside the misery of Mexico, the murder, the hunger, the bitter oppression and DOING NOTHING ABOUT IT.

Mexico will be civilized, WHEN THE UNITED STATES CIVILIZES IT.

Brigands will cease to rule, cease murdering their own people and Americans in Mexico when the United States gives the order and enforces the order.

The miserable underfed, underpaid, unhappy people of Mexico will know freedom and peace of mind only when the government of the United States shall become their government.

Not a citizen of the United States would undo the work that our Mexican war accomplished.

Not a Mexican brought under our flag by that war would have had things otherwise ten years after the war was over.

Not the people of this country, but the people of Mexico, will have most cause to be grateful, when Uncle Sam shall have done his duty and finished the task which this picture illustrates.

If you believe—as you must—that the government of California is an improvement on the government of Carranza and Villa; if you believe that the city of San Francisco and the free men of California represent improvement upon the miserable villages and the terrorized people of Mexico; YOU ARE BOUND TO BELIEVE IN WHAT THIS CARTOON SUGGESTS, AND BOUND TO WORK FOR AMERICAN INTERVENTION, WHICH WOULD BE MEXICO'S SALVATION.

He tried to snatch the vial, but the master of ceremonies forced him to his knees, as the leader drew back the saving drug with a cunning laugh.

"The poison is very slow. You need not take the antidote for two days," he observed. "A great deal may happen in two days. I will perhaps give you a chance for your life."

The culprit begged again for the drug, but the Master was adamant.

"You must earn it. I have work for you to do. And you have only two days in which to do it," he turned toward Varney and the ceremonial leader. "Leave us. I must instruct this man."

When the two were alone the Master engaged in an earnest conversation which lasted for many minutes. As he finished he relaxed once more in an easy chair, rubbing his aching limbs.

"I have now the chance to repay these agonizing hours. It is worth it all in the end," he muttered as he closed his eyes in evil reverie.

CHAPTER XXXVII
The Death Sentence

THE Master of the Black Order lay ... breathing heavily, his limbs twisting ... an occasional paroxysm of pain. ... black velvet curtains, close by the easy chair in which he reclined, seemed surcharged with the writhing of some restless spirit. Arthur Varney leaned forward studying the face of the leader with anxiety.

"Do you feel completely recovered, Master?" he asked. "I thought you were dead last night. We worked over you for two hours or more."

The other's voice was husky, as he responded:

"Yes! My astral went through the most terrible sufferings. The chord was nearly destroyed by the ultra-violet. How could that scoundrel have learned about its power? And how could the trap have been set for me so? Who gave the warning that I was going there myself?"

Varney shook his head. The Master fixed his basilisk eyes upon the dark ones of the clubman.

"Varney, I have more than once felt that there was a traitor in the camp. You know what happened to that blunder? Well, that was only the hors d'oeuvre of what I know how to do in the line of punishment. Beware of treachery, Varney!"

The other man's voice shook as he extended a pleading hand.

"Oh, Master! I have been faithful unto death. I have sacrificed my every desire to obey your mandates. ... ...in returned ... ...

TEMPTED TO SPANK

Dear Worried Mother:

[illegible] and I have [illegible] problem about [illegible] appeal to [illegible] Mary was [illegible] a dozen times when I was [illegible] tempted to spank her [illegible] a dozen times all told. [illegible] But there can't [illegible] the children that way now. Sometimes [illegible] mere corporal punishment is a good thing, but I have never [illegible] that kind of person [illegible] and perhaps it is [illegible] a girl. We were [illegible]

Jane goes to school and I [illegible] good fun to mark [illegible] [illegible] when she was [illegible] interested in other things besides [illegible] gadding and having a good time.

May, the younger, is now [illegible] and a college where a great [illegible] I don't [illegible] longer worry about [illegible] When she was [illegible] big [illegible] to her that war [illegible] seemed to break out just as soon [illegible] has done. She was [illegible] up against an [illegible] Neither [illegible] nor I could manage her. We [illegible] her petted, threatened, [illegible] I had to lock her [illegible] to all [illegible] combinations. I [illegible] but [illegible] nothing had to be done [illegible] to change her. Her mind was [illegible] on the boy or [illegible] new set of shoes [illegible] which she didn't have and [illegible] we could not afford to buy for [illegible] were another source of trouble.

Her father and I held several [illegible] and we finally did just [illegible] you are threatening to do—[illegible] her out of high school and [illegible] her away to a good girls' boarding school for her last high [illegible] grade year. She stormed [illegible] threatened, but her father [illegible] forced her to submit. He accompanied her to the school, about 80 [illegible] les from Boston, and with much [illegible] tiently left her in the care of the principal. We did not allow her to [illegible] come home for a year. When she [illegible] come she was an entirely changed girl—for better, much more [illegible] of a woman. I have discovered that Mary learned her lessons from contact with other girls all under the discipline of the principal. My solution is yours. Send your daughter to a good school where she will meet and emulate other girls. You will be surprised and happy at the change that a year will produce.

FLIRTING FAILS

Dear Appreciated Bride:

I'd advise me to make my husband jealous by flirting with other men. It simply won't work. I have tried even that, though it hurt me a little to do it. He didn't seem to mind. He loves me, too. I am sure he does. Can you tell me of some other way to "wake him up?"

PERPLEXED BRIDE.

WAIT FOR THE MAN

Dear Silver Threads:

I realize [illegible] You are quite [illegible] some matters.

Second, that [illegible] marriage [illegible] is well balanced as you seem [illegible] in many ways going after a husband because she thinks "it is time." Husbands drop into your lap. Good women looking for love DON'T go in the market seeking for some one to prey upon. You probably know that if you are [illegible] kind of a woman.

Now, our air [illegible] is [illegible] and [illegible] about [illegible] be [illegible] forget [illegible] for [illegible] after [illegible] week [illegible] yourself just as you have. The New Flivver

A City Life Movie Scenario

By Lewis Allen

SYNOPSIS

MR. HOOSIT, constantly nagged by his wife for a car, buys a Flivver. Both have some difficulty learning to operate it, but they finally succeed. Just as they become proficient something happens.

THE CHARACTERS

MR. HOOSIT.	FARMER
MRS. HOOSIT	OFFICE BOY
FLIVVER SALESMAN	MRS. M'SWELL

Fat man, Pedestrians, Autoists, Angry Neighbors, Etc., Etc.

THE SCENES

1—After months of nagging her husband, Mrs. Hoosit is suddenly asked what she would say if she saw him coming home in an automobile.

LEADER—"For the sake of the children I'd say you were—er—sick."

LEADER—"To start it you push this. To stop it you pull this. To back you shove that. To put on brakes you yank that. That's all. Here's twenty-five cents, your change."

5—(Same as 4)—Mr. H. shoves that. Car backs. He pulls this. Car goes forward. Runs into stout gentleman and bends front axle all out of shape. Fat man is peeved and speaks:

LEADER—"I could have you arrested for kicking me in the shin!

6—(Same as 4)—Flivver keeps going around in circles because of bent axle. Mr. H. picks it up and takes it back to shop. Gets a new car, but has to pay $2 extra. Hires office boy to take him home in it.

7—Near Mr. H.'s home. He makes boy get out. Drives car home. Honks horn loudly. Mrs. H. rushes to window in time to see him take away both gate posts as he swings into yard.

8—Back yard Hoosit home. Mrs. H. rushes to back door in time to see Mr. H. go into new garage and come out the back end.

LEADER—"I guess I shoved the wrong lever."

9—(Same as 8)—Mrs. H. helps him get car back in place. Fix-up garage. Mrs. H. speaks——

LEADER—"I'm going to learn to run it. I can run a sewing machine and I guess I can run that. Where's the treadle and the bobbin?"

10—Next day. Hoosit back yard. Mrs. H. takes out car straight across street, through fence and into neighbor's fountain. [redacted] men to take car back to garage.

11—Flivver school. Mr. H. learns to run one.

12—Another Flivver school. Mrs. H. learns to run one.

13—Sunday. Out in country. Mr. H. proudly running car. It stops. He get under it. Over it. Into it. Back of it. Front of it. He talks about it disrespectfully. Man comes along, looks in tank.

LEADER—"Yew hafter have gaserleen to make 'em go, mister."

14—(Same as 13)—Mrs. H. laughs at him. He walks back three mile fo' gas. Returns with can. Starts to pour gasoline in tank. No gas in can. Discovers leak in can! Mr. H. speaks with considerable warmth, gesticulation and emphasis.

LEADER—"! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! !——"

(Remainder deleted by Board of Censors.)

15—(Same as 13)—Mr. Hoosit walks back for more gasoline. Mrs. McSwell comes along in her touring car, hitches Flivver on behind and takes her friend, Mrs. H., home. Hour later Mr. H. shows up with can gasoline. Car gone. He looks under culverts, in bushes and up in trees, but cannot find wife or Flivver. He is worried because he had begun to grow fond of Flivver.

16—Ten miles nearer home. Mr. H. trudging along with can gasoline. Stops now and then to take drink of gasoline for bracer.

17—Mr. H. reaches home just as Mrs. H. is ready to start out. She speaks.

LEADER—"I've just filled the tank and was coming back for you, my dear. Get in and we'll have a ride."

18—(Same as 17)—He climbs in. Mrs. H. attempts to start car. There is an explosion. Both are tossed into big rambler rose bush. Steering wheel, one cushion and half a tire all that remains of the Flivver except a few splinters that come raining down. The Hoosits crawl out of rosebush and pluck thorns from their anatomy.

LEADER—Mr. Hoosit—"What happened?"

Mrs. Hoosit—"I don't know, but I think the car is damaged!"

19—(Same as 17)—They examine ruins. He picks up steering wheel and speaks, angrily.

LEADER—Mr. Hoosit—"Where did you get the gasoline?"

Mrs. Hoosit—"We didn't have any, dear, so I used naphtha!"

21—(Same as 17). Mr. Hoosit prances around in anger. He tells her he's not going to spend a week's wages for a Flivver and have her destroy it. He speaks loudly——

LEADER—Mr. Hoosit—"You big chump! Didn't you know that naphtha wouldn't make a car go?"

Mrs. Hoosit—"What are you talking about? It certainly ran this car go!"

I HAVE never yet proposed to any chickens
And as yet no chickens have proposed to me,
But I often sit and wonder what the dickens
I would say if some courageous little she Should speak up and say: "My dear,
I love you madly
More—much more—than any one
I've ever seen
Do you think that I'd be happy or sadly?

Gosh! I wonder what I would say to the queen.

JUST suppose that some nice loving little lady
Is beside me and we're seated in a park,
Under trees with leafy branches low and shady,
And the stars are making light spots in the dark,
We'll pretend that I am held in her embraces
And she's planting fevered kisses on my lips,
And she doesn't want to separate our faces,
Doesn't have to breathe in jerky little sips.

CAN you picture me receiving loving phrases
Such as "world's desire" and "ideal of my dreams"
From the loving little lady as she gazes
Right into my eyes and beams and beams and
Do you wonder what I'd do in circumstances
Like the named here? If you really wish you knew
You can ask me some Nineteen sixteen advices
And you'll very soon find out what I will do.

Why They Busted

A Masterly Series Dealing with Modern Society's Great Problem—Divorce. Transcribed from Life.

By ANNA M'GLUE

I WAS a girl of 18 when I married Jack. He was 24 and was earning a good salary in the office of the Acme Iron Canary Cage Factory.

We rented a cozy little house in Tightwaters. It was a pretty little place and my parents had furnished it tastefully.

Jack at first was awfully happy.

Often Jack would tell me how much he loved me, and many times he would add, "You know I never before believed the old saying about two being able to live as cheap as one. But it's a fact. Why, I haven't spent a nickel in a restaurant since we were married, Snookum-ookums."

We had been living in Tightwaters for a month, when Jack came home with his month's salary.

"Here, Snookums," said he, "is $40 to pay the rent."

"I need a lot more than that, Jack," I said.

"Whatever for, Kitten?" he asked.

In a strained sort of voice, I always thought meals at home didn't cost anything.

Picking up his $40 from the table, he walked out of the room and I have never seen him since.

The Cost of the War

IT has been estimated that the war in Europe is costing one hundred million dollars a day. The demon statisticians have got busy with this estimate, and have figured out all the things that can be done with a hundred million dollars.

They have demonstrated that a hundred million dollars piled in a single stack would be higher than the Woolworth Building in New York or the price of your wife's new hat.

They have shown that it would buy enough chewing gum to keep the entire Stenographers' Union and Salt-ladies' Federation busy for two hundred and thirty-eight years and seven months.

They have proved that if the bills were placed end to end they would go around the world more often than all the teams in the National and American Leagues go around the bases in the course of the season.

They have shown that if it were turned into one dollar bills there would be enough to paper the walls of all the rooms between Hirosaki, Japan, and Babahoye Etander, with enough left over to make paper napkins for all the lunch rooms in America.

In fact, they have calculated everything that can possibly be done with a hundred million dollars. But no one seems to have thought of figuring out the thing that cannot be done with the money. To supply that deficiency we have engaged an expert accountant, who has made an exhaustive report on all the things that cannot be done with a hundred million dollars. Following are some extracts from his report:

You can't get a guard big enough to keep the women away, if they know you've got that much money.

You can't pay your wife's shopping bills for a week, if you have a free run.

You can't keep your wife from being suspicious, if she smells chewing on your breath.

You can't keep your wife from using "She may be alright, but"—— when she sees another woman smoking a cigarette.

You can't unscramble an egg.

You can't knock a chip off an ice man's shoulder and get away with it.

You can stop the pests who argue about the war.

You can't make John D. enjoy a lobster supper.

You can't stop at an Atlantic City hotel for a week, unless you have a job to fall back on the next week.

You can't make yourself solid with the crowd that says: "I knew him when."

After all, a hundred million dollars isn't such a muchness, is it?

Beadle Kept Track

"I CANNA get over it," a Scotch farmer remarked to his wife. "I put a twa-shillin' piece in the plate at the kirk this morning instead o' ma usual penny."

The beadle had noticed the mistake, and in silence he allowed the farmer to miss the plate for twenty-three consecutive Sundays.

On the twenty-fourth Sunday the farmer again ignored the plate, but the old beadle stretched the ladle in front of him and, in a loud, tragic whisper, hoarsely said:

HOW TO MAKE A FORTUNE.

At a recent banquet a speaker gave a list of inventions needed that would bring the inventor a fortune. These included an automatic rug-beater, a corset that would snap on and off with a single catch and fit well, a buttonless collar and other things. He forgot to mention these: (there's a fortune in 'em):

A good strong pipe that your wife will let you smoke in the house.

Something that will remove the odor of cocktails on your breath, yet taste as good as the cocktails

Some dope that will make your wife economical, which you can slip in her coffee.

A coat to which long hairs will not cling

An invisible pipe line from the nearest cafe to your theatre seat

A newspaper you can open in the subway without having it fall apart all over the floor

A dress shirt that won't look like the Rocky Mountains when you sit down.

A plain, easy-to-read railroad time table that isn't filled up with "H," "No," "X," "K" and other puzzles which send you searching around to find that the train you want on Saturday doesn't run that day.

CLEOPATRA.

Queen Cleopatra never had
A pair of silken hose.
(She could have worn 'em very well,
As ev'ry picture shows!)

MOVIEGRAMS:

Our first actual proof that actions speak louder than words is in the success of the movies.

Who knows but what Hamlet would have made as big a hit as Charlie Chaplin if he had worn the same kind of trousers?

One reason why the women on the screen are so popular is because they never talk.

Half the legitimate actors and actresses who knocked moving pictures five years ago have now bought Summer homes and touring cars with their movie salaries. The other half couldn't get in.

The best thing about the movies is that the actors do not spoil the illusion of coming out and bowing between the last two acts.

CLEOPATRA.

Cleopatra in short skirts
Never shocked a forum,
Not that she was modest, but
Cleo never wore 'em!

MODERN FABLE.

Once upon a time there was a lemon haired boy whose collars messed more from top to bottom than all the way 'round. He got a job in a bank, but it made his head ache, he said, although the boss declared you couldn't get a pain in a vacuum. He got a job next to a clothing store, but the work was too hard for him. He couldn't dance the Dead March in "Saul" without stepping on both of his own feet at the same time.

In despair he got a job as a soda clerk, and everybody in town laughed at him. He fell madly in love with the daughter of the wealthiest man in the State, and used to get delirium tremens of the hands and St. Vitus Dance of the brain whenever she came in to get a Nutty Peach Sundae. One day he proposed to Isobel, the rich girl, and she nearly choked to death on a straw laughing at him.

The next time she came in he got so rattled while filling the fountain syrup cans that he poured several flavors into one tank. Later, when he discovered his mistake, he found he had made something different. He kept his secret, worked it up and put it on the market, netting more money in the next five years than there was in the local National Bank.

He married Sadie, the red-haired cashier in the drug store, built a ten acre factory and was elected Governor of his State in spite of the half million he contributed to his party, while poor Isobel nearly strangled with grief, envy, peeve and plain mad every time she saw Sadie's diamonds, gowns, footman, pearls, limousines and picture in the paper, which was at least once a week. When the one-time lemon-haired boy was introduced to Isobel at a reception, he said: "Ah, yes, I believe you are the person whom I saw have such a funny fit in a drug store." Isobel was never the same after that.

The difference between her and the girl who poses in the fashion plate reel is that one poses in filmy garments and the other in garmenty films.

They made a twilight sleep film but the Mayor wouldn't permit it to be shown in public. Yet he permitted the "Birth of a Nation" to be shown in public.

With some other show people I was performing before the inmates of the Massachusetts State Penitentiary. One gray haired convict shook hands with me afterward and said: "I can't find words to tell you how good it seems to hear the old jokes once again."

I asked him how long he had been in and he said twenty-five years. I thought I was a little better up to date than that. He told me he was writing a mot on picture scenario himself. In fact, he had finished it and it was ready for release. He was releasing it through an outside concern. (That's a little deep, but I think it's pretty good myself.)

This convict was what they call a trusty. He was like a new feature film—he was having a limited showing, previous to general release.

I wrote another scenario for a Los Angeles film company that had a menagerie and wanted to work the animals. So I wrote a "Perils of the Forest" film, in which the hero was to be eaten up by a lion. It was to be the real thing. The hero was an actor who had got sour on the company's hands, but he had a fat contract and they couldn't break it. So they started in to feed him to the lions, in the hope that he would resign.

So I wrote the scenario for them with the big scene where an angry lioness comes upon the hero and devours him.

Something went wrong when they tried to take that scene. The lioness wouldn't come out of the brush. They looked into her nest and saw that she had given birth to twin lion cubs.

I asked the camera man what he thought about it. And he said it was probably due to double exposure.

That reminds me of the Triple Alliance and the Quadruple Entente and how Henry Ford tried to stop the war between them. I don't believe in ridiculing Mr. Ford. It is true he didn't succeed in stopping the war, but he kept it from spreading. They say that Spain was just getting ready to hit Norway with a rotten tomato when Ford came between 'em and made 'em ashamed of themselves.

I'm not opposed to suiting Ford in the presidential chair myself. I think he rather deserves it. But if he doesn't get the presidential chair I'll bet he could go into his shop and show us how to make a little one for a nickel that is just as good.

When peace does come, I think he ought to receive his share of the credit, too. I would suggest that to commemorate his part in the peace all the divers stop running for five minutes. Some of them would never get started again.

I have a friend who runs a flivver and he doesn't need a speedometer to tell how fast he is going. When he gets to going more than ten miles an hour he can tell it by the way his teeth rattle.

A Few Fashion Hints

HAND EMBROIDERY is having a great vogue this season. Most girls consider diamond rings and narrow gold bands the most desirable kind of hand embroidery.

The designs of the new Summer frocks are very catching. In fact, contagious would be a better word—the designs of the dresses cause your wife to have designs on your bank roll.

The new silks made in America have a very lustrous finish. The price is very apt to be your finish—and it won't be lustrous.

The coats of the newest tailored suits flare at the hips. When the bill comes home it will make hubby flare, too, but it won't be at the hips.

Tortoise shell hair ornaments are again in favor. These shell games were always expensive.

Oriental effects are much sought after this season. The best way to produce Oriental effects is by the use of opium, but the police are very inconsiderate about that.

With all the new colors that are being created, the task of the husband who has to match a piece of silk is growing daily more difficult. The only way that he can match some of them is to capture the giraffes and horned rabbits that he sees on the morning after the night before.

Blue was the predominating shade in the Easter parade this year, and blue is the predominating feeling of the men who footed the bills for the Easter garments.

Love, Courtship and Marriage

By Uncle Job

WITH a view to assisting our young lady readers in their affairs of the heart — matters of taste, in dress and millinery, and the like — and other ills the flesh is heir to, we have engaged the services of Uncle Job, whose beautiful books on these absorbing questions have been translated into every two living languages and several dead ones. What Unk Job don't know about affections of the heart and blouses isn't in the books.

In all difficulties arising from any of the foregoing diseases Unk will be only too delighted to help you to the best of his ability.

Does your heart palpitate? Count the palps and write to Job about it. Do you want a paper pattern for a free wheel skirt with mud guards? Unk will supply it. Is your beau throwing one goo eyes at the minx in the candy store (her with the fixed eye that won't work)? Send for Unk Job. He's got a horrible left swing and a straight right.

To the following blushing correspondents he addresses the following advice, which, if they follow, ought at least to brighten their dull lives.

N. B.—We take no responsibility for the accuracy of our contributor, but can assure our readers that in his day and time Unk Job has been some gay boy, and always wore his hat at an angle of 35 degrees with the horizon. He's a hunky Unk, sure.

LILIAN—If he put his arm right around your waist you bet he means something. But you do not make it clear who paid for the ice cream. Never mind his intentions. Has he got the shekels?

Percy—(1) Because she wears a different shirtwaist every day it doesn't argue that she's any Jay Gould. She may work in a blouse shop and get the window goods half price. (2) Onion juice is good for mous tache forcing. Use plenty of it, but stay in an isolation hospital until the fur sprouts.

Joyce—There's a lot in what you say. If his knee squeaks as he sits down it is probably a wooden leg. Stick a hat pin in and see, but make sure which leg it is first. If he smells of Florida water every night, tell him to try closes or go on the water cart.

Henry W.—Be aware of a girl who quotes Emerson and R. W. Trine. Five to four she can't cook an egg without a book of rules. Poetry's not much good when a man wants food, and Higher Thought for tea will give [illegible] Better a dinner of herbs, old son.

Alta—(1) Certainly. (2) Certainly not. (3) Not on your life. (4) [illegible]

Lifty Ike—Of course you're not too old. Nobody is too old to [illegible] the blind god's arrows, but some of you do shove yourselves in too [illegible] Try some rouge for the stiff joints and hot treacle before going [illegible] The pimples would probably yield to the following emulsion: [illegible] Kp twice Aqua, more aqua, salts of lemon, gunpowder [illegible] sand, ipecacuana, calamus root, red pepper, quinine, essence of [illegible] rum and walnut juice. Pound together in a basin, boil, boil some more, and smack it on the pimples while still boiling. Rub salt and six [illegible] into the holes thus caused, jump into the river, and give yourself up to the police. If it's doesn't shift them, see a carpenter.

Artie—Nobody in the best circles ever spends more than a pint of Lafayette per diem (Latin for "each day"). Odd boots are not considered fetching these days.

Maudie—No; it is his business to pay the carfare and buy the candy, too. If he takes you to long walks and then borrows the money off you to come back with it shows a certain meanness of disposition. If you married him he would probably spend all his time finding you jobs.

Gertie—No dear! If you are married already it isn't considered good form to do it again. Suppose husband found out. He'd be angry.

Mariam—Right you are! Under the lamp Tuesday night.

Darling Jane—Oh, Jane I'm so glad. Isn't he nice! Pity about his knee, though. But I wish you all happiness, my dear. Let me know how you get on. Week's Best Stories

An Ad Man's Story.

During [illegible] one of ad writers someone told the following:

A man entered a shop one cold day and bought a woolen muffler. When he opened the muffler he found inside the photograph of a beautiful girl who was [illegible] in loving terms.

If you are single please write to me.

A name and address followed, and the man smiled. He was single. He [illegible] and was presentable. In a week he had fallen in love with the picture of the beautiful girl. So he wrote to her.

A week passed during which the bachelor was in a fever of impatience. Then he received this terrific blow in the shape of a letter.

"Dear [illegible]: The Mrs. Jones to whom you wrote was my dear mother. She died in the state asylum, aged eighty-seven. Your [illegible]

Upon investigating the strange case, the broken-hearted [illegible] discovered [illegible] had purchased the muffler from a dealer who [illegible] advertising.

"None whatever, ma'am," said the maid. "While she was using [illegible] I was [illegible]."

Good Thing for the Community.

During a political campaign in Maine some one asked an old farmer who [illegible] community seemed so determined to send to Congress a man who [illegible] eloquent than himself to be [illegible] rhetorical power.

"Well," asked the questioner, "why send such a windbag [illegible]?"

With [illegible] the former replied: "We think it would be a good thing for the community to have him where he could make speeches [illegible] are paid to listen instead of having him around here interrupting people at their work."

Quite a Celebrity.

A [illegible] was walking along one of the principal streets [illegible] when he encountered a well-dressed negro putting [illegible] one of the [illegible] to [illegible] cream at buildings. The negro worked [illegible] in the [illegible].

"Possibly, sir," agreed the negro in a delighted tone. "I've been here doing this sort of thing for the last ten years."

Q-BAN DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Everybody Uses It—So Handy. Harmless—No Dye.

By applying Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer [illegible] to your hair and keep all your gray streaked with gray prematurely gone or faded, dry or harsh hair quickly turns to an even, beautiful dark [illegible] every strand of your hair whether gray or not becomes glossy dark brown soft thick, with that even dark hue most of beautiful, radiant, lustrous hair—just as you like to have your hair appear—fascinating and abundant, without even a trace of gray showing, only natural, evenly dark, lovely hair. Q-Ban is absolutely harmless; no dye; ready to use. Only 50c for a big bottle at Liggett's Leading Drug Stores in Boston, Cambridge and Chelsea, Mass. LAUGHTER AND TEARS CLOSE TO EACH OTHER IN PARTING DAYS AT SIMMONS

PHOTOGRAPHS BY CHAMPLAIN STUDIOS.

Dear old Sixteen, loyal and true,
Though far away, we'll love you.
Though stars grow dim and fade away
Yet we'll love you forever and aye.
Intrepid Sixteen, loyal and true,
Our college days are growing few,
With blinding tears, our eyes grow dim,
Oh, don't forget us, old Nineteen Sixteen.

LAUGHTER and tears are very close to each other during these parting days at Simmons College. They are found in abnormal combination on every face, and underlie every word spoken on some bit of preparation for commencement festivities.

There is Marguerite Barnes, tall, dark and exceedingly pretty—equipped with all the erudition to make a trusted secretary, but Cupid has stepped in and changed her mind for her, and her classmates are saying: "All right, don't think you can forget us, because we are all coming to visit you," and "Midge," as they call her, smiles and says: "Come storm or shine to me, all days are fair——"

Love goes on and proves its contagion In the announced engagements of "Mil" Bouve, otherwise Mildred, Gertrude H. Clemence, lovingly called "Trudie," and Ellen Foster. Of Miss Foster her classmates (seemingly dollars) "She almost left us once to go to Ann Arbor to specialize in biology, but for some reason she decided not to go. Then we discovered the bad another specialty [illegible]. Mildie is wasting time [illegible] now asked Mac [illegible] evening to assume a well qualified to undertake the business of matrimony. She has the distinction of being the president of the Dormitory Government Association, a member of the Microcosm Board, tennis [illegible] to Student Government conference, usher at senior prom and delegate to Silver Bay. A record to be cherished, that! And the class is admiration says.

Whatever she did was done with so much ease;
In her alone 'twas natural to please.

Miss Clemence is also a senior prom usher and is the advertising business manager of the Microcosm. And right here, do you know what the "Microscom" is? It is the wholly clever and delightfully edited college class book; full of wit, humor and beautiful pictures. And help us a very precious document of happy college days by its owners, is the Microcosm, which means Little World.

The opinion of the class of '16 was expressed about Katharine Leonard when they elected her [illegible]

Never dejected while another's blessed.

[illegible]

"Most promising," Helen Flagg, Frances Banks and Frances Kergan

"Wittiest," Blanche Woodward and Isabelle Hurlburt.

"Most original," Isabelle Hurlburt and Gertrude Hussey.

"Most capable," Frances Banks, Julia Leamy and Eva Jacobi.

Ruth Hills, Margaret McGrath and Margaret Sinclair, "hardest workers."

For the "best looking" girls of the class the voters have named Alice Gray, Rose Reardon and Helen Geary.

One hears also over there in the Fenway district that when the Senior Secretarials take their straight head-dive into the pool of big business, "JC" Kurstead will come up in the position of a preacher's secretary with tracts in her right hand and daily food in her left. "Kath" has started her career of service to Men by organizing the Matrimonial Protective Agency, to furnish recommendations from a girl's roommate to her prospective husband.

To popular "Stelle" Hawley the girls lament. "Now, Estelle, it's perfectly all right to be neat, and [illegible] to see you practice [illegible] but when you come [illegible] to your own clean [illegible] you're a southern home to [illegible] environment wants to be a [illegible] but when she does [illegible] she's defeated a [illegible] and put her [illegible] on your new waist paper [illegible] Estelle cannot [illegible] you look her, is a very [illegible] having [illegible] a woman of some things [illegible] platonic friendship [illegible] and the war."

But I'm sure I've heard
She can catalog books in the dark.

Thus they rhyme about Elsie Cruttenden, the Connecticut girl who is going in for library work after she gets her sheepskin.

Anna Lundy of West Roxbury is envied by all the girls for two things—her splendid mind and the waist [illegible] her hair—and they say, "She thinks before she speaks, and thinks well."

[illegible] a certain [illegible] when [illegible] is the recipe said? [illegible] on of Wheat? Rose looks very demure, but whenever a joke is carried off, the question is, "Where is Rose?" And listen again. Gertrude E. The Free Dances on the Green That Help Bring the New Figure

A Silhouette of One of the Free Dance Movements.

The New Amazon Figure and How to Get It

By Marion Morgan

Formerly Physical Culture Instructress in the Los Angeles High School

It is a mixed product of a new regimen and of a new feminine psychology. Advance specimens of it are seen in every girl who is developing in the normal channels of out-of-door play. It is a harking back to the Amazon type, a leaning far away from the soft loveliness of the beauty standard of the centuries, the Venus de Milo. Its model is found in the Greek and Roman prints of female figures in the nude. Its characteristics are straight, square, man-like shoulders. Gone is the soft, flowing droop of the gently sloping shoulders.

Another distinguishing mark is the blending of the muscles of the thigh, the side and waist into one flowing line. The sharp dip inward at the waist, the prominent bulge outward at the hip, are vanishing. Instead is a softly blended, nearly straight line from beneath the arm to the side of the knee. The protuberances of the female figure are slowly melting into a rippling line, not quite perpendicular, but very far from the old, abrupt descent and ascent, the mountainous outline that was once accounted beauty in the female figure.

The nearest correspondence in art is the frame of the ancient Amazon. The nearest correspondence in nature is the ripple on the surface of but slightly troubled waters.

After the different silhouette one notices the increase in height of the new figure. It is easily apparent. For a growing girl the increase in height may be indefinite, given a right regimen. For the mature woman it is possible to gradually increase the height a half inch, an inch or one and a half inches, and in exceptional cases even more.

I repeat that the new figure is Amazonian rather than Milean. It is boyish rather than womanly. It is strong rather than soft. The Venus de Milo is beyond question the acme of physical loveliness. But it was a product of another time, of other conditions, of a different psychology. It was beautiful without sturdiness. It appealed. It did not command. One could not conceive its resisting temptation or disease.

The Venus de Milo represents the protected woman. It symbolizes the sheltered life. That type and that condition are becoming obsolete. Commercial and industrial conditions affected the life of woman. The face is the first to react to new conditions. The silhouette of the figure is the next to register those conditions.

The figure of the Venus de Milo is one that has lain much among cushions. It has rested after slight exertion. It has never hurried. It has never stretched its muscles, as rubber is stretched, to nearly the parting point.

Recall the figures of the Amazons. They are figures of women who have done things. Their powers of endurance have been tested. Their muscles have been stretched. They have stretched their spines, and thereby gained height. Throwing much of their bodily weight upon their shoulders has made those shoulders firm and lean and strong and straight.

This is the season to begin that manner of life that will bring about the new figure that is inevitably coming—that has actually indeed arrived. Even now the figure of the Venus de Milo, clad in modern gowns, would be "frumpy." For, say what we will about the Venus, from the viewpoint of artistry, here is not a figure that would carry clothes well. That is what the new figure does supremely well. "It carries clothes" as a queen is supposed to bear her robes, with regal grace.

This is the time above all others to begin developing the new figure. Are you fat? Are you, to use the common descriptive, "logey," which is another term for liverish or jaundiced? Are you disinclined to effort? Are you depressed?

Play out of doors. I care not what you play, nor what system of exercise you devise, if only the majority of your movements are upward. Contrive your play so that you will fling your arms upward. That way lies health and that way greater height. Acquire the habit of throwing your arms above your head, and you will feel the rejuvenating influence of the exercise throughout your body. And you will certainly grow taller. You will remodel your figure upon an Amazonian model.

Seven years ago, in the physical culture department of the Los Angeles High School, I took charge of a class of puny, undeveloped girls, and have helped them to make themselves the perfect girls you see in the Morgan dancers. I have done this by encouraging the play spirit out of doors.

I spoke of the new feminine psychology. It is made evident in my girls. We have been touring the country for two years. In that time not one "mash note" has been received by any of them. They are all beautiful girls, and they dance in few draperies, but their expression is free from sex. It is that of the buoyant spirit of the child. Such an attitude is a discourager and a rebuke to the lower mind.

Why Dancers Make Better Marriages than Show Girls

Kay Laurell, Who Recently Married Mr. Winfield R. Sheehan, Wealthy New York Politician. One of the Most Conspicuous Stage Beauties. She Combined Both Show Girl and Dancer Type. Her Husband Has Just Been Sued by Another Stage Beauty for Breach of Promise of Marriage. The Problem This Bride and Groom Face Is Whether the Dancer Luck Will Overbalance the Show Girl Ill-Luck.

"There is a 'Cuddlibility' About the Dancer That the Show Girl Lacks. Nimbleness Gets a Girl to the Altar Quickly."

The Real Reasons Agile Feet Outdistance Stately Beauty to the Most Desirable Marriage Altars Presented by an Expert in Feminine Loveliness and Its Matrimonial Rewards and Punishments

By Florenz Ziegfeld
(Producer of "Ziegfeld Follies")

WHAT type of feminine loveliness most quickly and successfully [illegible] the matrimonial altars? What height, breadth and weight of beauty be most rapidly adorned with bridal blossoms? Does the regal beauty of the stately step march most quickly to the altar? Or is it the nimble nymphs of the light fantastic that prance 'neath millionaire grooms to the Lohengrin wedding march?

Of all institutions the theatre provides the surest clue to the tests of the beauty-loving, romantically-possessed mate. Men go to musical comedies to see beautiful women. By the matrimonial bids for girls in a show we can ascertain the personal traces of taste for different types. The stage is generally considered the magical door to golden matrimony. What is according to popular opinion the supreme type of beauty is that represented in the classical Venus of Milo. But do men generally gaze upon this sublime marble with the passion of Pygmalion in their hearts? Has any man ever looked upon this standard embodiment of perfection and said to himself, "Well, if she were alive, she'd be the girl for me?" If so, I'd like to meet that man.

In every new musical comedy theatrical manager can present a line up of beauties who fit the model of the Venus of Milo as nearly as nature, in her poor efforts, enable us. These are the professional show girls—beauties who parade their loveliness on exhibition.

Behold, here is the pick of the year's most ravishing output. But do these beauty show girls featured because of [illegible] on the [illegible] of inspiring admiration—win out in the matrimonial game? Do they capture the richest millionaires and the most desirable counts and dukes?

They do not. What type of girl does, then? I can tell you, for I know.

Beauty in bulk misses out nine times out of ten in the matrimonial game in competition with agility and action. Light twittering toes captivate; heavy heels are feared as though for their power to crush. Nimbleness of limber legs gets a girl to the altar more expeditiously than majestic grace. The tiny hands of the pony ballet dancer, as they flutter in the air, weave their spell about hearts.

Weight is slow in getting to the hymeneal altar. Height does not win the most precious wedding veil. Why? The fact is that men do not like to look up to a woman. The American male is not—as is proverbially considered—on his knees at the shrine of the gold idol. It is not the girl who stoops to conquer who conquers the most desirable hearts. For men want a girl to look up to them literally. A man does not want a wife who can, physically, look down upon him.

Compare, for instance, the marriages of girls with twinkling toes and those of famously beautiful show girls of ample size and weight. Gertrude Reynolds was a dancer, of no particular fame, at two old Weber and Fields Music Hall in New York. Her lightsomeness and blithesomeness attracted the attention of J. P. McQuade, a millionaire manufacturer. The millionaire became so infatuated with Gertie Reynolds' frisking feet that he obtained a divorce from his wife and married the dancer. He passed away last Summer, leaving a vast fortune to his wife. In December Mrs. McQuade removed her ill-befitting widow's weeds and married Hylton George Morton North, nephew of the Earl of Guilford, and placed herself in the possible line of becoming a Countess. Miss Reynolds married twice and was each time the gainer—the first time of millions, the second of a chance to a title.

On the other hand, Gertie Millar, tall, handsome, a professional beauty, suffered heart-breaking losses. She married the composer Lionel Monckton. It is true, but only to lose him. The prospect of a second marriage to the Duke of Westminster failed—for while she lost her husband she didn't get the Duke.

Here is Kay Laurell. Kay was no dancer. Although petite she was, nevertheless, a show girl. And on her honeymoon her husband, W. R. Sheehan, is sued for breach of promise by Julia Beaubien, another beauty!

Saharet, the dancer, was slight, slender, but a perfect whirlwind on her toes. While he was visiting Berlin some years ago, Fritz von Frantzius, a Chicago banker and art collector, was struck by a painting in the studio of his friend, Von Stuck. "You must find that girl for me," he declared to the famous painter. The banker met the dancer at a tea given by Von Stuck. She won the millionaire's heart with the tempestuousness of her whirlwind dancing.

The banker's wife learned of the infatuation and decided he should have the girl of the painting.

Mrs. Eric Loder, Who Was Elsie Leslie, of the London Gaieties. A Perfect Show-Girl Type, the Reported Unhappiness of Whose Marriage Runs True to Form.

"Beauty in Bulk Misses Out Nine Times Out of Ten. A Man Does Not Want a Wife Who Can Physically Look Down Upon Him."

"I will marry you the day the decree is granted," declared Von Frantzius, and he did.

Camille Clifford was wooed by the Honorable Henry Lyndhurst Bruce amid opposition and difficulty. If he married the show girl, his father, Lord Aberdare, threatened to disinherit him, and he did.

Moneyless after their marriage, Camille Clifford went back to the stage and Bruce became an automobile salesman. The arrival of a baby further hardened the heart of the old Lord, and discouraged, young Bruce enlisted and went to the war. He was killed in a charge at Ypres.

Then there is the beautiful Lily Elsie, a perfect type of showgirl. She left the London Gaieties to be the rich Mrs. Eric Lode. Is she happy? Reports say far from it.

Adeline Genee is one of the most shining examples of a dancer who danced her way into fame, wealth and a wondrous marriage. Miss Genee married Frank Ismit, one of the most distinguished and wealthy London barristers, and legal adviser to the Duke of Newcastle. So pleased were the Duke and Duchess of Newcastle with the match that they attended the wedding and gave the happy couple one of their [illegible] nuptial gifts. The dainty Danish dancer enjoys a position in the most exclusive British society and has one of the handsomest homes in London.

Adeline Genee was never famous for beauty. Gladys Cooper was. Tall, majestic of mien, she won a prize in a competition for the loveliest face in England. Ill-fortune pursued her, however, her relations with her husband, H. J. Buckmaster, being strained, and a divorce is now threatened.

And there are scores more of similar cases that can be quoted.

Men prefer agility and grace to beauty and bulk. They want to possess by their strength. Ah, could they catch her, how would they not hold the tiny tot of the twinkling toes in their arms and utterly subjugate! What a game! What a tempting prize! When he regards the big girl the average man is impressed—if not intimidated—by her looming height. He may not be conscious of his feelings, but subconscious[illegible] the [illegible]ousness of enfolding that large girl in his embrace must occur to [illegible]m. Would you like to marry a girl who[illegible] lift you off your feet? Or sit you [illegible] prodigious lap? Or have her shake [illegible] well-aired though admirable fist [illegible] your face? The little girl can dance all about you—she is petite, agile, [illegible]ing eluding. But caught, you [illegible] her to your own desire to be [illegible] in matrimony, though bound by [illegible] every man likes to feels himself a [illegible]ential tyrant.

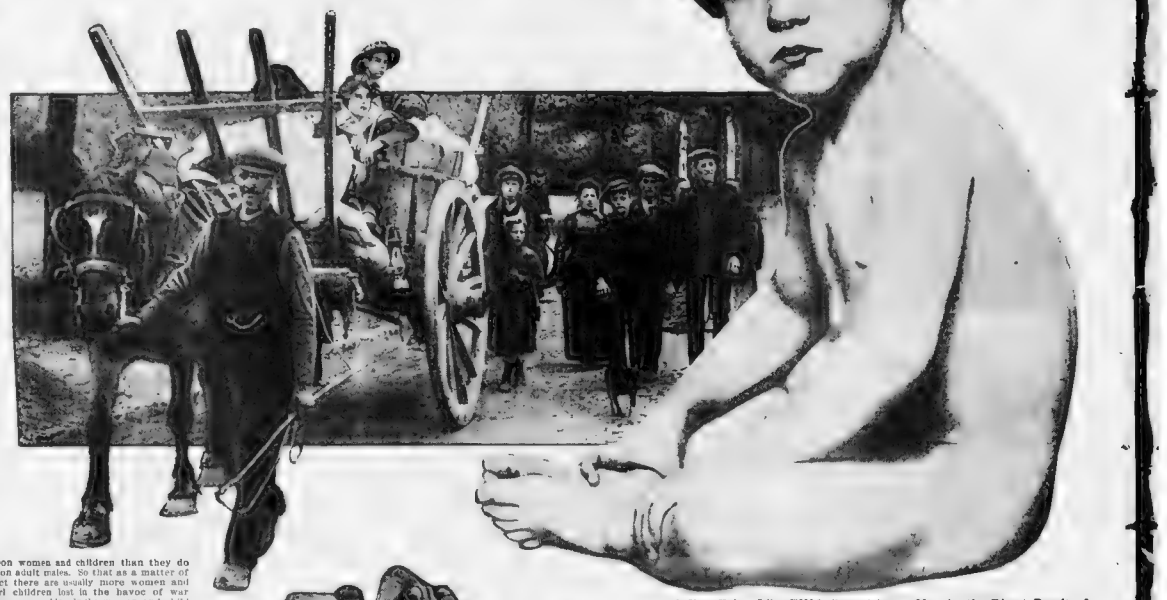
WHY WAR BABIES MAY BE MORE OFTEN BOYS THAN GIRLS

Dr. Woods Hutchinson Explains How Science Accounts for the Remarkable Apparent Effort of Nature to Replace the Men Lost in Battle



A Boy Baby, Like THIS, Says Science, May be the Direct Result of Conditions Like THIS: Peasants of Northern France Fleeing from the Invading Germans. The Upsetting of the Normal State of Society Causes a Disturbance of the Mother's Normal Physical Processes, Which, in Its Turn, Upsets the Balance of the Sexes, Thus Producing in Sterner Times a Majority of the Sterner Sex.

By Dr. Woods Hutchinson
The World's Foremost Physician-Author.

ONE of the most unexpected war results comes in the recent announcement from England of a distinct and apparently growing increase in the number of boys among the babies born withing the last three months.

Whereas the general average for the past ten years had run about 1,045 boys to each 1,000 girls, the rate took a jump in the first quarter of last year to 1,032, second quarter to 1,042 and the third to 1,055. This is not a very huge increase, only about two per cent, but it seems to be progressing, and is, from the militarist's point of view, in the right direction. Apparently it is calculated to do something to redress that terrible and bitterly lamented surplus of females in modern communities, of which we have heard so much in recent years, particularly in recent months.

Perhaps it might be well, first, to explain what looks like an apparent contradiction to those unversed in the melancholy science of vital statistics. This is that although there are more females than males in the entire population, the number of boy babies and girl babies brought to birth is singularly nearly equal, with an almost invariable slight surplus of boys.

This surplus, however, or the greater part of it, disappears very early in life, much of it at birth itself, from the painful but practical and anatomical reason that boy babies have larger heads than girl babies—due, of course, to their superior mentality (?)—and hence more of them die in the process of birth. And at every successive decade of life the really sterner and superior sex takes increasing advantage of the defenseless male, and wears him down and survives him in ever increasing proportion. So that it is to be feared that after all, the surplus females will get the better of it after the war, in spite of this modest increase in the proportion of defenseless boy babies.

This is not by any means the first recorded instance of an apparent attempt on the part of nature to redress the disturbance in the balance of the sexes caused by war. An increase in the proportion of male births has been reported, in a crude and general way, from a wide variety of both races and continents, not merely after war, but also after famines and devastating pestilences.

Much of this has been put down to loose popular rumor of the "wish as father to the thought" variety. And considering the fact that really complete and well kept and reliable records of all the births in a country scarcely come into existence until the last fifty or sixty years—our own birth rates in these United States are still about seventy per cent complete—there is small chance of finding any accurate and reliable data either in support or disproval of this popular claim.

But there are a few instances which the within the range of modern vital statistics, notably the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, in which the records in Prussia (and curiously enough, also in Paris) show a slight but distinct increase in the percentage of male births in the first and second years following the war. A similar though slighter increase was found after our own Civil War. And now comes this unexplained slight increase of male babies in England.

Several explanations have been offered for this puzzling phenomenon, first and most popular of all the mental impression [illegible] certain to be fixed with better grace and career looking upon the memory of some husband brother or son who has fallen, and this powerful and constant mental influence has in some mysterious manner conditioned and determined the sex of the unborn child.

But this explanation gives us little light and bears up poorly under analysis. First for the reason that history is full of, and our own personal experiences include scores of instances where the keenest and most fear-ridden desire for a boy or girl baby or two but of a number of whole lifetimes has been for a son to bear the name or carry the title, with the result only of one daughter after another until the law of averages and of equal sex births steps in to relieve the situation. It never does.

Secondly and more fundamentally, because [illegible] contrary to popular impression, five sixths of the death rate in war [illegible] from battle or wounds received in [illegible] but from pestilence, privation and [illegible] all even more heavily upon women and children than they do upon adult males. So that as a matter of fact there are usually more women and girl children lost in the havoc of war than men. Already the women and child victims by starvation, exposure, disease and massacre in Belgium, in Poland in northern France in Armenia and Serbia equal if they do not outnumber the terrible totals of the casualty reports of all the armies. And there is no valid reason why the bereaved mother should grieve more deeply and sincerely over her lost sons and brothers than over her lost sisters and daughters.

There is only one suggestion and that a tentative one, which can be advanced toward clearing up even a part of the mystery. This comes from the work that has recently been done, largely by American scientists, upon the possible determination of sex in the ova or [illegible] of various insects, fishes, frogs and birds. Forms in which the eggs can be hatched or caused to be developed outside of the body and hence under conditions where every stage of their development can be carefully observed and studied.

They have by no means solved the mystery of the determination of sex, but two things have been determined with a fair degree of clearness. One that an astonishing and most constant equality between the sexes in numbers born runs through almost every division of the animal kingdom and is apparently based upon a curious law of "odd and even" like the toss of the dice. All the germ cells of one sex, usually the female or ova, are exactly alike, while the germ cells of the opposite sex, or sperms, are of two kinds which we will call odd and even.

To put it very roughly, if an even sperm first reaches and unites with an ovum, the result will be a female; if an odd sperm it will be a male. And as by a "spitting" process, which can only be explained in most appallingly technical terms, odd sperms and even sperms are produced in exactly equal numbers, the chances of an "odd" combination and an "even" combination are exactly equal so whenever the births count up into the thousands, this equality shows itself with [illegible] constancy, as has long been found in the male and female births of our own species. Never more difference between being than three or four in the hundred save for brief periods, and when twenty or more years in succession are taken not more than ten or fifteen in the thousand.

To guard against a wrong impression, it should be stated that while in the majority of the different forms of animals from frogs and insects up, studied in this manner, it is the female cells or ova which are all alike, and the male cells or sperm which are of two different kinds, in some forms of animals, notably birds, the condition is reversed. The male cells are all alike and the female cells of two different kinds.

This of course would at first sight appear to put the control of sex in any form or degree utterly and hopelessly beyond our power. For it reduced the question of maleness or femaleness to a purely mechanical problem of mathematical chance, which of two sperms identical in every respect, except odd-ness or even-ness shall first learn and fertilize an ovum; both kinds of sperms being produced in exactly equal numbers. And to [illegible] little question that this is the actual state of affairs in the overwhelming majority of instances. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, males and females are produced alternately in precisely "fifty-fifty" proportions, as surely and as inescapably as numbers [illegible] will come odd and even alternately. The sexes are literally born in pairs, regardless of what we do or don't do [illegible] as our eyes or our ears or our hands are.

Experiments Have Shown That the Matter of Food and Its Assimilation Has a Marked Effect in Some Animals Upon the Determination of Sex. The Photograph Shows One of the Extraordinary Three-Headed Frogs Which Were Produced by Dr. Roux, the Distinguished French Scientist, in His Brilliant Series of Experiments for Determination of Sex in Frogs.

But there are exceptions to every rule and evidence is steadily beginning to accumulate that while [illegible] remorseless equality of the sexes always obtains under normal conditions under abnormal and exceptional conditions this balance may be upset, and one sex produced in much greater numbers than the other. It has, for instance long been known among certain [illegible] insects, which produce many broods in a season, that through the Summer when food is abundant and weather conditions favorable males and females are born in equal numbers.

But when Autumn comes on with cold and storm and a scarcity of food supply, the broods show a large preponderance [illegible] of one sex, sometimes females, but more commonly males. It has also been known that by feeding frogs upon unusual or specially stimulating and nutritious food, like meat, their eggs when hatched would show a large preponderance of one or the other sex, usually the female.

But when these instances were carefully studied out by a number of independent observers, the results were curiously variable and even conflicting. It seemed impossible to decide what one influence was the cause of the changes and there was a strong suspicion that in one cases the sexes were born in equal numbers, but that one was killed off much more rapidly by cold or wet or starvation than the other. So that by the time they were, so to speak, big enough to count, this sex would have almost disappeared.

But of late years, after and out of [illegible] Britain Rights Reserved scores of unsuccessful attempts to change or control the proportions of the sexes, four or five positive successes have been recorded by scientists, not merely competent, but of high standing and under the most careful and exact laboratory conditions. In one of these Hertwig, of Munich, one of the highest authorities in the embryological world took two batches of frogs' eggs, or ova. One of these he fertilized at once by sprinkling sperms over them, and these hatched out tadpoles in the proportion of fifty males to fifty females. The other batch, however, he allowed to stand for several days in the watery part, or serum, of frog's blood, until they soaked up water and became overripe. Then he fertilized them with sperms as before and succeeded in producing tadpoles in proportion of eighty males to twenty females.

Three years later one of his assistants repeated the experiment and so successfully that he was able to obtain in some batches over one hundred per cent of males, and, of course, no females at all.

Some three years ago a very skilful and gifted American embryologist, Miss King, at the Wistar Institute, in Philadelphia repeated the Hertwig experiment, only she reversed it, that is to say she dried the eggs instead of letting them waterlog themselves, and with results to correspond, namely, ninety per cent of females while undried and untreated batches showed the usual fifty-to-fifty proportion.

Obviously from these three findings the male would appear to be the "happy sex. It would be perhaps too much to hope that further researches along this line might throw some ray of light upon the profound and mysterious differences between men and women in their craving for fluids and liquors of all sorts. Possibly men are compelled to vote "wet" in their basic chemical composition, and women to vote "dry" for the same reason.

Just recently Whitney, of Wesleyan University, has succeeded in controlling the proportion of males in the low form of worm, the rotifers, by feeding. A curious feature of this experiment was that he had in the famous words of Oliver Wendell Holmes about the prevention of disease "to begin with the grandparents." By feeding the grandmother generation upon a particular green infusorian, he could increase the proportion of males in the grandchild generation from 6 per cent to 80 per cent.

Evidently while the famous proverb "It's no use teaching your grandmother to suck eggs" may hold good among the rotifers, it is of great practical importance if she can be taught to eat green infusorians.

Finally another eminent American embryologist, Whitman, by a prolonged and most extensive and laborious study upon pigeons, which he bred and kept by hundreds for six or seven years, cut short by his lamented death, was able to distinguish two types of eggs—one with a smaller yolk and larger percentage of water, which would usually hatch a male, and another larger and richer in [illegible] which would produce a female.

It has also long been held by [illegible] breeders and supported by considerable body of studies and data from agricultural experts, notably Russell, of the University of Maine, that female germ cells, or ova, fertilized promptly after their production by the ovary would produce equal numbers of males and females, while those which are delayed several days, or even a week before fertilization, produce a considerable preponderance of males.

The question is still under hot debate and laborious experimentation, all over the scientific world, and these findings are sharply challenged from various points of view, and are, of course, too few as yet to settle the question. But their general tendency is to render at least probable that various abnormal conditions which injure the vitality of the ovum, or female germ cell may be capable of upsetting the balance of the sexes, and that the commonest result of this upset is an increase of males.

Apparently for the reason, humiliating as it may be to our masculine pride, that it takes less goods and trouble to make a male than it does a female. When Nature hasn't enough material to produce her masterpiece, the female, she does the next best she can, and turns out a male.

As one eminent experimenter expresses it, in all the shuffings and combinations of the chromosome dice, "the [illegible] always something plus," or to reduce it to a mathematical formula. "Female equals male + x."

This leads us to the apparent probability that whenever conditions are such as to depress the vitality and weaken the health of mothers, so that the nutrition of their ova, or germ cells, suffers, there may be an increase of male births.

No conditions could possibly be devised better adapted to produce lowering and disturbance of the nutrition of the mother and through her of the ovum than that devil's complex which we call war. There is loss of the wage earner and supporter of the family and marked impairment of the family income and food supply, housing and general comfort. There is grief and worry over the absence of dear ones and often destitution after their loss, which necessitates the women turning out to do a man's work in addition to their own. There is a tremendous rise in the price of food and a corresponding drop in the quality and quantity.

There is frequently pestilence and for those who are unfortunate enough to live in the regions actually fought over, privation, massacre and famine as well. A similar surplus of male births has often been reported after famines and destructive pestilences.

If anything which depresses the resisting power of the maternal protoplasm will increase the probability of male births then war certainly ought to be the most powerful male sex determinant [illegible].

The Duke of Manchester

His Grace of Manchester Tells American Men That to Be Neat and Well-Dressed, Not Over-Dressed, Is the Sign of a Cleanly, Efficient Mind

By His Grace, the Duke of Manchester

Written Especially for This Newspaper

SHOULD a man think about his clothes?

I think the answer is he should think, but he should not brood.

There are, broadly speaking, three types of ordinary civilized men. The hobo, the clean man and the dandy. There is no use talking about the uncivilized man, because abstruse calculation as to whether he shall wear eight or only seven cutails in his girdle is unlikely to have any permanent effect on his moral character. In the civilized man it is different.

My experience tells me that, although it is hard to say who first the egg or the chicken is the best to make a man, clothes and character are mutually indicative of one another. I know this is not the theory that has been forced into us by the novel, the melodrama and the press.

In all of these the villain is a well-dressed man and the hero looks as if he had stood outside a second-hand clothes store with a coating of limelight and paid the proprietor to throw the stock-in-trade at him. But the melodrama in many ways is not a faithful mirror of real life.

For instance, in real life heroines are luckily not always followed around by individual snowstorms. So do not run away with the idea that every well-dressed man spends his lonely moments gnawing his finger nails and repeating "Foiled again" more often than you can help. It is as much that if you can once love a girl on to bigger she is yours; nor if at it is likely that every eldest butler will accost you with the most obsequious air and say, "Sir, the master is waiting for you in the library, sir, with a loaded revolver, sir."

It is safe to suppose that he should rather have the "To Let" sign on his head or that he was a "Sissy."

But this war has done away with that theory and proved that the "nut" as often as not was a corker with qualities of brain and courage second to none, and that his dressing was the safety valve of a cramped environment. I am compelled to admit that in France, at any rate, even the "Sissy" has in many cases upset the calculations of every body by his gallant behavior during this crisis.

But to return to the ordinary well-dressed man. I am sure that here is where you are generally successful. Look at well-dressed, cleanly, tidy habit of mind.

In the first place, a man cannot be well dressed unless he is clean, and conversely it is almost impossible to be clean without being well dressed.

Now there are many fallacious proverbs, but that "Cleanliness is next to goodliness" is not one of them. The habit of cleanliness is gloriously retroactive. Think it out carefully and you will agree with me. They realized this in Roman times. They realize it in the East to-day. But in Europe it is more an instinct than a realization.

The habit of decent dressing and cleanliness does more for a man's self-respect than flattery. I know of men, the only whites within hundreds of miles in West and Central Africa and elsewhere, who religiously dress for dinner every night. It sounds ridiculous, doesn't it? But it isn't. It has a double effect. It saves them from falling by imperceptible degrees into the degraded filth and slovenliness of the surrounding blacks and it sets them apart still further from the savages.

You know for yourself that you instinctively feel that the untidy man is abnormal, that he is either a slacker or a crank. I believe millionaires and dukes are supposed to have the privilege of being untidy in dress. But few of them avail themselves of this privilege.

The late Duke of Devonshire had the greatest loathing for new clothes, especially boots and hats, and always had a valet with the same sized feet to break his boots in. Also I remember he had one particularly villainous old hat and, on one occasion, all the ladies in a house party at Chatsworth sent wires to London for hats for him. But that was an exception. Also the wearing of old clothes by dukes is liable to lead to mistakes.

My grandfather once travelled down the Midland line with a drummer in the same carriage and also a dead neighbor. The drummer was talkative and the other two answered him. At Bedford, the dead neighbor got out. He was met at the carriage door by an enormous red liveried footman, who asked if His Grace had any more baggage in the luggage car.

The drummer was greatly perturbed, and calling the guard asked who it was. "The Duke of ——." The drummer dropped back in his seat and, with eyes large with dismay, said "And to think I was talking so affable with ruff raff like you and me!"

I remember, on my first visit to Australia, Melbourne Punch said that I differed from my grandfather, who was well-known there, in that I looked like a bank clerk, while he looked like a superannuated farm laborer. Be young, I retorted, in an interview by saying that Australians were all right but got mixed up between impudence and impudence. Both sides rather sacrificed the truth for the sake of being smart, but no matter.

No doubt, some men adopt a certain studied carelessness in dress from a mistaken belief in the truth of the novel-melodrama idea, but you will usually find that these are people who don't have to look for a job. However regrettable it may be, we all know that, consciously or unconsciously, employers are influenced by an applicant's appearance.

I fear that prima facie unknown, ill-dressed ability gets very little chance of getting hired alongside of well-dressed mediocrity, and while, in a few cases, the employer may lose an untidy genius, he is more liable to be right than not.

Needless to say, standards of cleanliness vary, like standards of morals, with the difference of latitude and longitude. I don't recollect, for the moment, whether Miss Carle, the painter, actually mentions it in her intensely interesting story of her stay with the late Dowager Empress of China, but she told me, and I am sure will forgive my repeating a very curious thing illustrating this.

She had been living in the palace on intimate terms with the Empress, for three weeks or so, seeing the Empress constantly, and for several days Her Majesty had appeared to have something on her mind. At last she burst out: "When are you going to take a bath?"

Miss Carle was not unnaturally astonished, and replied: "But, your Majesty, I take a bath twice a day." "No, no," she was told, "you sluice yourself with soap but you don't bathe; that only rinses off the surface dirt. In order to bathe, you should be rubbed with scented oils, wrapped in hot sheets, lie in a hot room till the pores of the skin are thoroughly cleansed." There is a lot of truth in this, but I am inclined to put the Dowager Empress in the "nut" class in washing.

To sum up, as a rule the dowdy in dress is the dowdy in mind, more often than not. The over-dressed man is liable to be either finicky or ostentatious, and it is to the well-dressed and well-groomed man we must look for the well-balanced, cleanly, efficient and orderly mind.

Next week the Duke of Manchester will write an article, in his interesting series, on "Should Married People Part When Love Dies?"

Beau Brummell, as He Looked When He Impressed England's Prince Regent by His Exquisite Clothes, a Case in Which Clothes, Though Extreme, Were Directly Responsible for Success.

The Other "Extreme" in Dress. These Poor Fellows in the Bowery "Bread Line" Lost Their Ambition to Look Neat Before They Fell to This Condition, According to the Duke of Manchester's Philosophy.

"Man and boy, for forty years." No, no, not that! Anything but that! Excuse me, the language is catching.

In real life, as Tweedle-Dee said, it is contrariwise. The man who is untidy in dress is usually untidy in mind and slovenly in his personal habits, because his clothes reflect his thought processes. The poorest man can be clean in this day of public baths and some of the most threadbare clothes I have ever seen were tidy.

Of course, if you go to the other extreme and are a nut, you place the observer in a quandary. Like all people who go to extremes, it becomes hard to lay down hard and fast rules. One thought one had the elaborately dressed man classified before this war. It seemed fairly

My Own Story of My Torture By Villa
As Told to My Executioners

By DON LUIS TERRAZAS, JR. Son of "Mexico's Richest Citizen"

The Most Remarkable Revelations Yet Made of the Barbarous Anarchy in Bandit-Ruled Mexico

THE Terrazas were, at the outbreak of the present misgovernment of Mexico, the wealthiest family in that country. Don Luis Terrazas owned millions of acres in Chihuahua, one of the richest of the northern States, and his fortune was estimated at anywhere from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000.

His son, Don Luis Terrazas, Jr., was the family manager of the estates and the heir to them. All the Terrazas, after persecution at the hands of Villa, are now in this country and practically penniless. The bandit leader confiscated all the real property, devastated a great part of it and looted Don Terrazas of his enormous fortune. The captivity and torture of Don Luis, Jr., was one of the most barbarous incidents of all of Villa's outlawry.

This newspaper is enabled to print Don Luis Jr.'s own story of his experiences with Villa, and on these pages is given the second installment of his remarkable narrative, begun last week.

Dramatic and tense as it is, its greater importance is its revelation of the real Villa, brutal, cruel and merciless, the shocking conditions of life under his misrule, and finally the picture it presents of a great country fallen into barbarous anarchy.

Don Luis Terrazas, Jr., and Four of His Daughters, Who Escaped from Villa's Clutches by Being Disguised as Humble Peons.

No. 2—How Villa Hanged Me---And How I Revealed the Hiding Place of $500,000 to Ransom My Mother and Sisters

I TOLD last week of the conditions that prevailed in Chihuahua before Villa's entrance into that city, whose name is the same as the State of which it is capital, of my father's flight across the desert and of my arrest. I ended that first installment with the demand of Captain Farias, on behalf of Villa, for one million pesos silver (approximately $500,000 in United States money) for the payment of Villa's "soldiers."

"For my part, I have no money," I said, "and the properties of my father and brothers have already been confiscated by General Villa."

"True," he answered, "but you must know these confiscations are not of a permanent nature; your properties will eventually be restored to you."

"That may be the case," I said, "but what will eventually happen does not have anything to do with any money I have at present. Since I have been deprived of everything, naturally I have nothing to give to General Villa."

Captain Farias stared thoughtfully at me a moment, then withdrew. The next day Villa came to my room and ordered the guards to leave us.

He sat down and said, "Don Luis, I must have money to pay my soldiers. You must give it to me."

"General Villa, I have no money," I said

"If you have no money," he replied, "your father has much I must have some if it. I know that you and your father are officials of the Banco Minero. (He referred to the bank in Chihuahua City of which my father was president and a director.) That bank has money. Where is it? Have you buried it?"

"Neither my father nor I have buried the money," I said,

"Well, there is this much about the matter," he replied, "you must procure the money I require in order to save your life and the lives of your family. You have told me you wished to send them to the United States. Unless you procure the money they will never leave Chihuahua."

"Great Villa," I replied with firmness, "I have told you I have no money nor have I any means of obtaining this sum."

He rose, his great fists clinched and his face contorted. "I shall have every rich man in Chihuahua shot," he roared as he left the room.

During the next four days he came several times and renewed his demands for money and repeated his assertion that I must have the money. Always I answered him the same and, inevitably, he would leave the room in a rage.

It was the fifth night, when one of the guards shook me and said, "Wake up. Colonel Medinavetia, by order of General Villa, has come to see you."

Jose Antonio Chacon, the officer of my guard, then ushered in the colonel and Manuel Vaca.

Getting out of my cot, I said, "Senors, I know that you have come to shoot me. I am ill apparelled for death. I ask permission to dress myself."

"Yes, you may dress yourself," muttered Medinavetia, and I did. My collar and cravat were mislaid; I could not find them and as I fumbled around my visitors began to show impatience, so I quit my search, saying, "Senore, I will not further detain you. I am unable to find my collar and cravat, but for the purpose for which you want my company I do not especially require them. Let us go; I am ready."

That moment is seared into my memory by its trial of my resolution of mind.

There was but one ineffectual lamp in the room; its poor rays, however, served to reveal the malignant visages of the two men, leaving me no manner of doubt as to their sinister intentions. Vividly came to me the appearance of my friend Irigoyen, whose hopeful "Adelo" had been but the presage of his murder.

The officers were in very elegant civilian raiment, bought, no doubt, with some of the money they took from Irigoyen. At their sides hung heavy sabres and revolvers of large calibre. To this day it is frequently that I awake suddenly at night confronted by the picture of that scene. There were no more words.

As we descended the stairs my thoughts were centred on my wife and children, helpless before this army of cutthroats, and for the moment these sad reflections made me forget my sorry plight. In my absorption my step missed and I stumbled; quickly I was brought up from my thoughts by a blow and a curse. In silence, save for the tramp of our feet upon the floor, we passed through the corridors of the Palace and out into the street.

It was a foggy night and I saw indistinctly the outlines of a motor car. On the front seat beside the chauffeur was Pasquale Tostado, chief of police of the city, and the officer of the guard, Jose Antonio Chacon. Medinavetia and Vaca took their places on the rear seat with me between them. The colonel was on my right and on my left Villa's official murderer.

No fetters were placed on me, but the two men watched me closely. We drove rapidly through the city into the blanket of darkness that enveloped the country. A thin stream of light pierced the roadway from our head lamps. It was scarcely sufficient in the thick fog. In about twenty minutes we arrived at La Junta de los Rios. On the way not a word had been exchanged.

At this place where two rivers unite there was a flickering camp fire with twenty or thirty soldiers grouped around it. There were no salutations, no commands; no sound but the roar of the mingling waters. When the car stopped the soldiers drew up beside it. Tostado drew his sword and with imprecations, dealt me blows with the flat side of the blade, knocking me from the seat to the ground. This fall nearly stunned me, but with kicks and blows I was driven into the shadow of a great tree by the river bank. The scars of those sword blows and kicks I still wear on my body. Again I was felled by a peculiarly vicious blow. As I was lifted to my feet, Tostado said:

"Don Luis, you gave Pasqual Orozco fifty thousand pesos as a ransom. Now you must give us one million or we will kill you."

"What I gave Orozco," I said, "I gave involuntarily. It was under duress he got the sum from me. Now I have nothing and he who has nothing can give nothing."

"Don't talk that way to me," said Tostado angrily. "You are the richest man in Mexico. You have money and we will have it. You are going to give it to us to save your life."

I became calm under their revilement and there came to me the thought that the truth earnestly spoken might impress them. So, under the huge overtowering tree, which they had selected for my gallows and with the light of the automobile lamps falling upon their dark faces, I addressed them, saying.

I Appeal to the Hangmen of Villa Not to Kill Me.

"Senores, Villa, your General, has taken from me all my property. He has also taken all of the property of my father and of my brothers. It is a stranke thing that Villa's followers should ask anything of me when they know they have robbed me and my entire family of everything as possessed.

"It is true that my father was the richest man in Chihuahua, but I tell you that his money was made only by hard work and only in an honest way. Then came the revolution, and it was announced that he was oppressing the poor when, on the contrary, he is the only man of great spirit and great energy in Chihuahua, who has always helped the poor.

"When he was young my father was poor. Then he earned a little money and bought a piece of land. Afterward he continued to work. Then came the Indian war that caused great trouble in Mexico, not only in our country, but in the United States as well; but my father kept on working, and as long as his capital would permit he bought lands in Chihuahua.

"As a boy I began to help him develop these lands. We worked together. There was danger and fighting with the Indians, but we held steadfastly to our task. Now I tell you that after he developed these lands people who lived not by work, but by stealing, came and took his properties away from him. It is with hard work, frugality and intelligence that he has succeeded."

Those men gathered closer and listened more intently, and I felt that the ring of sincerity in my voice might prove convincing.

"I tell you," I cried, "that he was a friend of Juarez, the Liberator. He saved Chihuahua from the French. Now they say he is not a friend of Mexico, but I tell you he is the best friend Mexico ever had.

"You say you want money. I tell you I have no money. You have me in your power. You Villistas have taken from me everything but life. Now you want that. I am powerless; go ahead."

Chacon, the officer of my guard, who had formed a liking for me, stepped forward and entreated Medinavetia to save my life. But his importunities were useless, beating and cursing me they hustled me forward until I stood beneath a horizontal limb of the tree. From this I saw a rope dangling and in the end of it was a noose.

They Hung Me from a Tree to Extort One Million Pesos for Their "Soldiers."

Colonel Medinavetia was in front of me, and behind me was Vaca and Tostado.

Though I was then almost unconscious from the blows I heard Medinavetia growl at Tostado, "What the hell is the matter with you, Pasquale?"

Vaca then took hold of the nose and slipped it over my head from behind. I made no effort to resist, though I was still unbound. I knew it would be useless to fight as the soldiers encircled me. I began to wish it were all over very quickly.

As Vaca tightened the noose about my throat Pasquale said, "Don Luis, this is your last chance. Will you or will you not give us the million pesos?"

I shook my head.

The rope grew taut and then I was jerked from my feet and felt myself ascend. The blood pounded in my ears. The roaring of the waters grew frightful in its intensity.

I swung for a moment, gasping, and my bulging eyes saw the faces of the men below laughing and taunting me; and then I knew nothing.

* * * * *

Light! The light of day! And in its surprising flood I saw above me a friendly face! I tried to study its lineaments, but they wavered and faded into a background of black, out of which rose with frightful distinctness that scene at La Junta de los Rios.

Around my neck a suffocating rope; above me, dimly outlined in the fog, the giant tree to which I was hanging; the circle of leering faces of Villa's soldiers; the flickering camp fire which gave them the aspect of dancing, taunting devils; the roar of the confluent rivers pounding in my ears: the curses of Medinavetia, the sardonic laugh of Vaca, the executioner; darkness and oblivion.

That picture went and the face reappeared. After a long period of earnest and difficult study, in which the countenance, in grotesque fashion, took many shapes, I managed at length to overcome the feverish fancies which possessed me and recognized my faithful guard, Jose Antonio Chacon.

"What has happened, Jose?" I muttered. "I thought I was dead." I made an effort to rise. I had not the strength. Chacon put his hand upon me with a gentle, restraining touch.

"You were brought back from death," he said, and the tears ran down his cheeks.

Yes, they had recalled me from death, but in doing so they had had no thought of mercy. They had spared me, but I would have found an unmarked grave at the foot of Mt. Santa Rosa, along with that tragic train which went out from the gray prison of Chihuahua to the hill of death, had it not been for the strange turn my destiny took and for the wonders which human hands and hearts and minds can work, even to surmount walls of enduring stone and to tear asunder iron bars.

But as I looked up into the face of Chacon there was yet no glimpse to me of the unbelievable future, only a mental chaos whose slowly developing theme was the crash of conflicting ideas. I had believed that I had entered the gates of death, but here I was in the land of the living.

Chacon brought me a glass of water and poured it, by drops, down my raw and swollen throat. Again I tried to rise, but every muscle and joint was on fire and the blood beat in my temples like hammers. In that moment of raising my head I saw that my clothes were terribly torn and bloodstained and my coat was full of thorns.

"How did it happen?" I asked. "How came I here?"

Slowly, under my insistent questioning, he described to me the scene beneath the tree at La Junta de Los Rios.

"Vaca placed the noose around your neck," he said, "and several soldiers, at a word from Medinavetia, seized the other end of the rope and gave a jerk, which suspended you nearly a yard from the ground. I thought they were going to leave you there until you were dead. Even then you were apparently lifeless. At this juncture I ran to Medinavetia and Vaca and begged them to spare your life.

"'He has no money,' I cried, 'but he is a powerful man, and if you let him live he will be able to get it for you. What value is a dead man to you?'

"'Let him swing,' said Vaca, and just then you gave the death rattle.

"'My God!' said Medinavetia, 'he is dead! Let him down quickly!' The colonel himself seized your body in his arms and, while thus supporting it, called to the men to cut the rope. Under his cursing this was done in an instant and you were lowered to the ground, then laid by the fire. At first there were no signs of life. I can assure you, Don Luis, it was a blanched and fearful circle of faces which the flare from the burning faggots lit up. I heard Medinavetia and Vaca whispering.

"'We have made a pretty mess of it,' said the Colonel.

"'Villa will punish us for this,' said Vaca.

"And then I learned that they had not intended to kill you. General Villa had ordered them to torture you to the last degree possible short of death. Presently there were signs of life. Finding that they had a living instead of a dead man to present to the commander, the two leaders became so overjoyed that they embraced. Quickly they lifted you into the automobile and brought you here to the room from which they took you. And yet, during all these hours, it was uncertain whether you would live or die."

The honest fellow had no sooner ended his recital than my mother, wife and sisters Luisa and Adele came to visit me. Chacon met them at the door and, blunt soldier that he was, said: "Don Luis is almost dead. They took him out last night and hung him."

With a scream the women rushed into the room and when they saw me all burst into tears. What a sight I was—all covered with blood and dirt, my clothes torn, my neck black and swollen to twice its normal size and my face fearfully congested.

My devoted relatives sent me delicacies almost hourly from that time, but I was unable to swallow. For three days I lived on water and orange juice. The distracted but tenderly ministering women had just gone when Chacon ushered in an emissary of Villa, a man well known in Mexico. I saw by the expression upon his face, which was hypocritically solicitous, that he came upon some mission of roguery. I knew him by sight, but it was the first time I had ever met him. He asked me what the trouble was.

To Save My Mother and Sisters I Reveal Where $500,000 Are Hidden.

"This," I said, blazing up and pointing to my swollen throat. "It is the work of your master, Villa. But go tell him from me that Luis Terrazas, Jr., prefers to be shot rather than live and be subjected to this kind of treatment."

"Tell me," he said, with a pretence of sympathy, "why did they torture you?"

"You know very well why it was," I replied. "It was because I would not pay Villa one million pesos ransom."

He left, promising that he would intervene for me, and yet I knew as well as though he had told me, that he was busy scheming how

"We had to take a desperate chance. My daughters must be gotten away from the unspeakable dangers that menaced them at the hands of Villa and his band. They were disguised as servants and were carefully instructed in the way they should act. Dressed as humble peons and with shawls over their heads, they passed, after many dangers, safely through the Villistas, and managed to get to the railroad station and into a train for El Paso."

he might help his chief wrest the money from me. As I lay back exhausted I resolved that they should never have a peso for their murderous cause. "Not a centavo," I said, but I had no sooner uttered the words than there rose before me, as a picture, the form of my mother, my wife, my daughters and my sisters. The memory of what Villa had done to women began to torture me, and there came to me very disagreeably the conviction that, if I could not produce money for this former Chihuahua butcher and bandit, I should pay more dearly than mere coin could measure in the liver or the honor of those most dear to me.

When the emissary returned there was no longer any doubt in my mind as to what I should do. Abruptly checking him as he was about to report upon the result of his talk with Villa, I said:

"Colonel, I have not the amount that General Villa asks. But I do know where there is a large sum in Mexican gold, and if he will let me go and give me a safe conduct to the border with all the members of my family who are here I will tell him where it is."

He looked at me through half closed eyes for a moment, as though measuring my spirit, then left me. Within a few minutes he returned. "General Villa," he announced, "will let your mother and sister go to the United States, but as to yourself and family he will give no such permit."

At first I refused to consider such an arrangement, but, as I argued with the emissary, trying all the time to penetrate to the motives of Villa through the words and acts of this, his tool and errand boy, there flashed into my mind an idea, the fruition of which forms the main part of the strange adventures through which I passed. I made my decision then, and said:

"Tell General Villa that if he opens up one of the iron pillars in the Banko Minero he will find half a million in gold."

"Which pillar?" he asked excitedly, preparing to rush forth.

"I do not know," I said, "but in one of them the money is concealed."

He waited for nothing further but dashed out. "May that money bring your master nothing but ill-fortune," I wished as he left, and if ever a wish was fulfilled it was that one.

As I have explained, my father is the president of the Banko Minero and my brothers and myself are directors. Our family owns a majority of the stock. Prior to the war the bank had large deposits, but as the revolution persisted most of the money was withdrawn.

How the Treasure Was Hidden in a Hollow Pillar of the Bank.

When we learned that Villa was to occupy Chihuahua (at the time Mercado retreated across the desert to Ojinaga) we held a directors' meeting and decided to hide what funds we had on hand. The bank is a two-story stone building and the second floor is supported by hollow iron columns which are set in the foundation. One of our number at this meeting suggested that the money be concealed in one of the pillars. It was then out of the question to reach the United States or any point outside of Chihuahua with this large amount of gold. It was equally hazardous to attempt to hide it outside of the bank building itself, as the act of taking it out, however careful we might have been, would have attracted attention and invited discovery.

It was therefore agreed to place it in one of the columns, and in the darkness of that night the cashier and two of the employes went to the second floor and removed a few boards directly over the top of the pillar chosen as the depositary. And then, very quietly and with infinite care that no one should notice what they were doing, the three men carried the gold in bags up the stairs and poured it down into the hollow column. When all the money had been carried to this new vault the boards were replaced and all signs of disturbance removed.

Villa found the gold; they drilled into two or three columns, I was told, before coming upon the treasure, which was six hundred thousand pesos in gold. And when they had it they lost their heads. I am convinced that the opulence which that money brought to Villa, the one-time goatherd, butcher and bandit, was a turning point in his career. Witness, I ask you, what ill-luck, suspicion and treachery the theft of that great sum brought immediately in its train!

Instead of paying his soldiers he divided the loot among a few of his favorites, and, of course, kept the lion's share for himself. Of this he spent one hundred and sixty thousand pesos in the purchase of a 500,000 acre ranch from a German Jew named Edward Lines, including with himself in the title of ownership Trinidad Rodriguez. This was the General Rodriguez who later terrorized the north and was seriously wounded at Zacatecas.

Villistas in Chihuahua Executing a Political Prisoner Within Earshot of the Prison Cell in Which Don Luis Terrazas Was Confined.

Villa kept for his personal use sixty thousand pesos gold and placed it in a clothes-press in the house of San Juanica Torres, an aged woman of Chihuahua, whose granddaughter, Juana, a young and beautiful girl, was one of his wives. One night the money disappeared from the clothes-press. Villa, in terrible rage, accused San Juanica Torres, Juana and his own chauffeur San Juanica was imprisoned in the Chihuahua penitentiary; Juana was taken before the civil court and examined, but was released later, and the chauffeur was kept a prisoner for a long period.

Well, to return: The day after I had told this man about the gold, his end Villa came to my room. It was the first time I had seen the latter since he had ordered me tortured. Both were smiling and amiable. Villa looked at me blandly, a trifle jocularly even, I thought. I noticed a change in his appearance from the former days when he was a colonel under Pasqual Orozco and came to my home in Chihuahua. With his new power and his easily found wealth (at my expense, largely) he had taken on an air of assurance. I cannot express it better than by saying that he acted as though he regarded himself as a man of destiny. I had never seen him so cleanly dressed. Also I had never seen his face thoroughly washed before. Power and position had improved him in one respect at least.

"Well, Don Luis," he said, "I have the money. Now I am going to take you to your father's house, where you will feel more comfortable," and he looked at me with a humorous expression as though we had just enjoyed a pleasant experience together. The coolness and carelessness of the brute were past belief and I looked at him in amazement. The matter of ordering a human being tortured was something to be debonair about! This was too much, and I burst forth.

"General Villa, by your orders I have been nearly killed. I have been hung and beaten and even now I am not able to eat anything. Why did you do this to me? Have I ever harmed you?"

He gazed at me with a quizzical expression for a moment and then disclaimed all responsibility. But as he turned I saw him wink at his companion, and I learned that he, Villa, had personally planned the details of my torture.

My Family Escapes from Mexico and I am Sent to Prison.

At 8 o'clock that night I was taken to my father's house in a carriage, a large guard escorting me. Soldiers searched the rooms and sentinels were stationed inside and out. A few days later Villa gave orders that all of my relatives, excepting my immediate family, should go to El Paso, and they set out one night, a party of sixty, including the servants. They arrived safely in El Paso, met my father and other relatives there and settled down to await the end of the revolution, which most of them are still doing.

As to my own family, we later had to take a desperate chance. My daughters had to be gotten away from the unspeakable dangers that menaced them at the hands of Villa and his band. They were disguised as servants and were carefully instructed in the way they should act. Dressed as humble peons and with shawls over their heads, they passed, after many dangers, safely through the Villistas and managed to get to the railroad station and thence to El Paso. But of this I shall write more fully later.

For three months I and my family were prisoners in my father's house. On the afternoon of a memorable day Cruzcon, who still commanded the guard, informed me that an official wished to see me. Soon this person entered and gruffly announced:

"I have been ordered to take you to the penitentiary."

Mark the strange coincidence of my imprisonment: It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon when I received the order. Three men accompanied me to the carriage, which was No. 3 of the private liveries, and, arriving at the prison, I was placed in cell No. 3.

In this dank smelling, sinister place I seemed to see that mournful company which, since the days Francisco Madero had taken up arms against Profirio Diaz—and before that also—had gone forth in the gray mornings to the foot of Mt. Santa Rosa and never returned! The walls, ceiling, floor and door were of iron. The cell was so small it was like a coffin, a comparison which recurred often in my mind with grim effect. Upon the door, as I stood in the murky shadows of the place, I noticed something white—a small square. Going closer and straining my eyes I found it to be a newspaper clipping relating the details of the murder by Villa of my former friend William Benton, the Englishman.

After several weeks I was moved to a larger and lighter cell. The door was not locked at all times, and I was permitted to stroll through a certain portion of the penitentiary. Ghastly excursions they were! Almost daily I would see the guards adjutant Medinaveitia and Vaca with their evil following of soldiers, drag out some poor, protesting prisoner and lead him, bound, to the base of the hill of death. This was so near the prison that we could hear the voices. In the morning air there would come to us, as we sat waiting in our cells, a "Viva Mexico!" or a "Merced (mercy) Senores!" according to the spirit of the prisoner, then a volley of shots and silence.

I will mention but a few of the incidents of horror which came under my notice before passing on to that which was first a daring bit of imagination, but was later translated into resolve and then into action. I mean my desperate plot to escape from the prison. The illustrations which I am to give typify hundreds of cases.

Nightmare Scenes in the Prison Where Villa's Prey Were Herded.

There was brave Campo who called out to the firing squad in a tone that thrilled even those hardened murderers. "Untie my hands and bring here your self-styled General Villa! When he faced death at the hands of Huerta he cried like a baby, coward that he is! Let him come here and see how a true man dies!"

Swiftly following the words he stooped down, burst the ropes that bound him and picking up a handful of earth from the freshly dug graves meant for himself and his seven companions, who made up that morning's quota of victims, he scattered it gently over their heads and said, "May the dust rest as lightly as this upon you, my friends."

We, who were in prison, heard the crash of musketry and knew that there were eight men who had gone out from among us who would never return. The details of the striking scene of defiance I learned later from an eye witness.

In the same distressing train of memories comes the picture of the citizen of Chihuahua and his young wife, who were passing the prison one day. Captain Refugio, an officer of the guard, was at the entrance with six soldiers. They stopped the couple and took them into the prison, where there were a dozen other soldiers. They placed the man in a cell and the woman in the one that adjoined. Iron bars separated them. For hours the poor woman was at the mercy of the beasts, and all the while her husband was forced to look on. The pitiful pleas and shrieks of that woman sounded throughout the prison but, fortunately for her, they were silenced by death.

Let me pass swiftly over the next several months, now to me a hideous nightmare of murders committed in the name of execution, of the prison resounding with the cries of mistreated women, of torture and of shame. It was December 13, 1914, that I was standing at the door of the penitentiary when I saw several prisoners brought in. They were ragged and dirty, and unkempt beards covered their faces. One of them glanced up, saw me and gave a start. Then he saluted. In surprise I answered him. As he was passing on the attendant who was standing near me said:

"Do you not know who that is, Don Luis?"

"So far as I know I have never seen him before," I replied.

He looked at me curiously. "I think you have," he said. "It is your son, Guillermo. He was taken prisoner in Mexico City and is now sent here."

Guillermo! Was it possible I had not recognized my own son? Greatly disturbed I went to the director of the prison and asked if I might see the man who, I had been told, was my son. He said I might talk to him through the bars. I went to the cell indicated; the man was indeed Guillermo, but how changed! He looked as though he had had terrible adventures, and I soon learned that this was the case.

Hastily he sketched to me what had befallen him. He had gone to Mexico City to intercede for me. After many mishaps he had been made prisoner and sent to Chihuahua with General Rabajo, an aged Federal whom we both knew well. (General Rabajo died a few months later in prison, after he had received a letter from his wife telling him that she and the children had been forced to seek shelter in a home for the destitute. The news broke the old man's heart.)

Ten New Commandments for Health and Economy

THE ten commandments about economy which the government of Germany has issued to every housewife in the land suggestions which might profitably be followed by people of every nation in times of war. They are as follows:

Do not eat more than is necessary. Avoid superfluous meals. This will improve your health.

Regard bread as sacred. Use every piece of bread for human consumption. Try using dry bread. It makes a very wholesome and nourishing soup.

Save butter and fat. Replace them when eating bread by syrup, marmalade, and jelly. A great deal of the fats are imported.

Encourage the use of milk and cheese. Be particular and drink skimmed milk. Drink butter milk when possible.

Cook potatoes in their jackets only. You will save twenty per cent in this way.

Reduce your consumption of beer and other alcoholic drinks. By doing this, you will increase our stocks of grain and potatoes, from which beer and alcoholic drinks are made.

Eat large quantities of vegetables and fruits. Use every suitable little piece of land to raise vegetables. Save your canned goods whenever fresh vegetables are to be had.

Collect all foodstuffs not suitable for human consumption such as kitchen slop available for animals. Be extremely careful that no poisonous substances go into the slop.

Cook and heat with gas or coke. In the making of gas and coke most important by-products are gained—among them nitrogen, containing ammonia.

The people of Germany and all the rest of the world will adopt and follow these ten commandments not only during the war but after it is over and continue to do so for one hundred years, the world would undoubtedly profit sufficiently to compensate somewhat for all the suffering and destruction the war is causing.

By Frank Parker

THERE is much interesting information regarding the hair that is not generally known but worth while mentioning. Hair grows faster by day than by night, as already stated in a previous article, and in warm weather than in cold, probably due to greater systemic vitality and increased activity of the nourishing processes at those times.

Men's hair, even if uncut, will not grow to the same length as women's. A new hair grows twice as fast after it is half-grown and varies from ⅜ to ⅝ of an inch monthly, depending upon the individual's vitality. Toward the end of life the growth of the hair is almost imperceptible.

On normal heads the average number of hairs to the square inch is 1,000 to 1,200, and the total number on the average head ranges from 80,000 to 130,000, depending upon its color and texture. Light hair is usually thinner in texture, but stands thicker, while the reverse is true in the darker shades.

The diameter of the hair is from 140 to 1,200 to an inch, women's hair being coarser than men's. In cross section it is oval, circular, many sided, or somewhat flattened, the latter being most likely to be curly. Hairs on the same head are not of uniform diameter, neither is an individual hair of the same thickness throughout. The hair is hygroscopic, readily absorbing moisture, and this is important in affecting its texture.

The chemical constituents of the hair substance are about half carbon, one-fifth each nitrogen and oxygen, and one-twentieth each hydrogen and sulphur, the proportions varying with the color, except that the nitrogen remains the same in all. White hair of elderly people contains considerable phosphate of lime.

The hair is the least destructible part of the body and the last of the tissues to yield to decay. Hair in an excellent state of preservation has been taken from mummies which have been in the Egyptian catacombs for four thousand years, showing even less susceptibility to decay than the Pyramids and Sphinx near by. The bones disintegrate into their natural elements, but the hair substance remains. Some scientists advance the startling theory that it feels from the decay of elements about it, but this seems unbelievable.

There is neither physiological or scientific basis for the belief by some that the hair grows after death. Its growth depends upon life, circulating, energizing blood, and when this stops nothing supplies new cells or tissues. This has been proven by the preservation in alcohol of portions of the scalp with hair, which showed not the slightest indication of continued growth. The belief is probably due to a shrinkage of the tissues which causes the hair to project further out of the skin. A change in coloration may take place, which could be ascribed to chemical reactions and changes.

You should be most discriminating when selecting the hair parlor or barber shop which you propose to favor with your patronage. In the first place, satisfy yourself of the ability, skill and mentality of the operator, and his or her efforts to serve you conscientiously. Next, see that the shop's appointments and equipment are ample and up-to-date. Above all, note whether or not it is kept clean and what sanitary precautions are taken.

Remember, the hair carries not only the microbes of its owner but also those from other heads, and when you go in a busy hair shop, where a number of heads are being worked upon and their microbes stirred up and set afloat in the air there is a possibility of your being infected if at the moment you should happen to be susceptible to infection. Probably nowhere else is the hair so heavily laden with germs and microbes as in the busy hair shop. This emphasizes the necessity of good air circulation to carry off, as much as possible, these millions of floating germs.

Also note whether the operator is sanitary in his personal habits and sterilizes his implements, combs, brushes, etc. Insist on the last. Your comfort and health is the first consideration and you have a right to enjoy one and safeguard the other. Do not allow an assistant to get careless with your hair or dry it too rapidly.

When you have found a thoroughly modern, well-kept, sanitary shop, furnished with up-to-date labor and time-saving devices and equipment, with courteous and efficient operators, in other words a high class shop, pay the price and confine your patronage to it exclusively because of the greater mutual interest and understanding that comes from repeated personal association.

And if ever the time comes when there are under consideration laws to regulate hair shop practices and sanitation, if reasonable and practical, do every thing in your power to help [illegible]. Such laws are badly needed and no one will more gladly welcome them than the conscientious and up-to-date hair dresser.

A great deal of interesting information may be had with regard to the manufacture of hair goods. Very few women wearing artificial hair know where their false hair comes from and what processes it undergoes before it ornaments and supplants their natural locks. Very little machinery is used in manufacturing [illegible]. It is mostly hand work requiring dexterity and good eyesight.

Many hair dressers make a specialty of working up hair pieces from customer's combings, such pieces usually being far more satisfactory. All hair combings must first be "rooted," that is the root ends of the hair must all be together. Some may think that is done by picking out each individual hair, but this would be far too laborious and slow.

In the article on the structure of the hair it was stated that its outer layer consisted of scales with the free ends pointing toward the point, and this makes rooting comparatively easy, in fact it is now done largely on this principle, by machinery. Take a hair and pull it forward and backward through two fingers rather tightly pressed together. In one direction it will be perfectly smooth and in the other rough.

However, a very small percentage of hair pieces are made up in this way from combings. Manufacturers of hair goods prefer to buy the regular commercial hair, practically all of which is shorn from the heads of the peasants of European countries. Annually these peasants flock to regular established hair markets, and for a consideration submit to the shears, their luxuriant tresses to be transplanted to the head of misery of fashion. So you can never tell where your false hair comes from or even what the nationality—or even color of its former owner was. If you insist upon buying low priced hair pieces, you may be wearing Chinese hair treated with acids to reduce its coarseness.

Black hair usually comes from Spain or Italy, golden hair from Germany, yellow from Holland, while some of the finest auburn and flaxen hair comes from Great Britain. The average weight obtained from each head is five or six ounces from the French, Spanish and Italians, and ten from the Germans. Convents furnish a large amount of hair, which is called church hair. Prices paid range from 20 cents per head upwards, depending upon its color, length, texture and quality. Golden hair of fine quality brings as much as $2 an ounce, and a fine head of white hair brings $5 an ounce.

The quantity used annually is staggering to comprehend. It is said London and Paris alone use annually 100,000 pounds each, or a total of 100 tons for both cities. Imagine the amount used by other cities and towns the world over, and contemplate the number of girls and women who annually sacrifice their hair to supply this enormous demand. The price paid its original owner is, of course, a very small part of its final cost after being cleaned, disinfected and manufactured.

There does not seem to be much doubt as to the therapeutic value of electricity in treating various physical disorders. Whatever utility or efficacy there is in the respect, is, of course, applicable to the scalp as well. All authorities agree that electricity is especially potent in stimulating the blood and nerves, two factors of prime importance in hair health and growth.

The delicate, minute capillaries and nerves of the scalp are extremely liable to become dormant and functionless. By their rejuvenation the adjacent tissues are revitalized, and the hair receives more blood and therefore added nourishment, gains new life and added strength. The sebaceous hair appendages not only better perform their natural functions, but are enabled to better resist retrogressive tendencies or susceptibility to disorder.

There are a number of electrical devices for the application of electricity to the body but very few are specially adapted to the hair and scalp. Appliances for the body would not suit the purpose as regards the scalp because of the difficulty of obtaining proper contact. This is accomplished by two combs attached to battery wires, the circuit being completed through the scalp.

The best device we have seen is an electric hair brush, generating its own electricity by means of a miniature dynamo inserted in its back and operated with the thumb at high speed by means of multiple gears. The current can be applied strong or weak, inasmuch as the hand, arm and body complete the circuit, the effect of the current extends beyond the scalp. In fact by the use of wires and electrodes, the current can be applied directly, concentrated or diffused, to any part of the body, answering all purposes of other body devices. This brush

New Things Every Woman Ought to Know

WALKING AS AN AID TO BEAUTY

By Mme. Lina Cavelieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

HAVE you ever looked into a mirror directly after you [illegible]

If you happened to look into the mirror [illegible] after coming in you must have been startled by the contrast. No "Before Taking" and "After Taking" advertisement ever contained a more striking lesson. The mirror lesson after a walk plainly teaches that circulation promotes [illegible]

Watch your skin during a bath and you will see exactly what [illegible]

Before out for a walk. The skin that was pale and dead looking when you began your tub soon flushes a delicate pink, then a deeper and deeper color. This is what athletes mean when they ask you if you react after the bath.

In cases of extreme anaemia or when an invalid takes his first plunge bath after an illness, there is no reaction. The skin remains pale, or even turns bluish. Persons whose skin does not flush after a bath should change their method of bathing. For instance, if they have been taking cold baths [illegible] natural to bathe, but each constitution to its own method.

I like the word "toning," as a physical culture instructor once used it in talking to me. "Walk," he commanded. "Until the blood boils up to the surface."

That is a picturesque putting of the results of a good walk. The blood surges up to the surface and batters down the gates of the pores, gates that should be battered down, for they are constructed of dead matter, refuse of the system, that has halted on its way out of the body and unless encouraged will stay, stagnate on their hinges and lazily float back again into the currents of the blood, and be reabsorbed in the tissues.

The Summer is a good time to form the walking habit. If you have been a desultory walker begin now to become a systematic one. Walk [illegible] the cool parts of the day, the morning and evening. Rise early and walk before breakfast. A hint here to the [illegible] Exercise before breakfast is one of the best means of reducing the flesh. Take a little less sleep, and give yourself an hour out of doors. If [illegible] in the dripping [illegible] It [illegible] be fat is fat-headed still better, and [illegible] the cool [illegible] hours

SUMMER DRESSES

Lady Duff-Gordon Describes the Newest Stripes and Furbelows

LADY DUFF GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes exclusively for fashion article for this newspaper describing all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

By Lady Duff-Gordon

THREE notes dominate Summer gowns of the smarter sort. They are bouffant. They are ornate. Stripes and contrasts persist in their construction.

The largest picture on this page presents a typical smart frock of the Summer of 1914. It has, you will observe, the three distinguishing features I have cited—bouffancy, embellishment and stripes. The model can be reproduced in any dark color preferred, with alternating stripes of white or of lighter shade of the dark hue. The material may be substantial voile, gracefully clinging Georgette crepe or delicate batiste.

The wide skirt has a three quarter length tunic of the same material. Variety is given by horizontal bands and narrow side panels of the reversed stripes. The sleeves are of silk in the solid dark color present in the stripe.

A girdle loosely crossed in front shows the colors of the motif of the gown. This effect may be secured by lining the dark colored silk with silk corresponding to the paler color of the scheme or by securing the useful reversible silk, the silk that has its own lining. The hanging ends of the girdle are fringed.

The bodice turns back in long revers of white net finished with loosely gathered ties on one side and a cascade of it on the other. The front is filled in with full, gathered fine net. The edges of the silk sleeve are finished by narrow turned back cuffs. Under these are closer sleeves of lace half lining at the wrists.

The picture at the bottom of the page is a model that will be effective in white or light colored linen, faille or taffeta. The full skirt is rendered more bouffant by the wide flounces of its garniture. A smart new touch is given by a tight-fitting waistcoat of dark satin, chosen according to the taste of the wearer. The sleeves are of elbow length.

The third model here reproduced is the simplest yet. It shows to what amount of ornamentation a lingerie gown is susceptible. The simple white gown with a blue sash will look frumpy this season.

If you have one, adorn it with fresh wide embroidered flounces and introduce fullness into the bodice. Note the large buckle that emphasizes the wide, soft girdle.

ANOTHER MISTAKE IN AN UNGUARDED MOMENT.
RESOLVED
THAT MY MIDDLE NAME IS 'MISTAKES.' BUT MA SAYS SHE'S PROUD TO KNOW THAT I AM SO GHASTLY HUMAN. I NOTICE THAT THE MOST FORGIVING FOLKS IN THE WORLD ARE THOSE WHO MAKE MISTAKES THEMSELVES. THE PERFECT PEOPLE HAVE NO PATIENCE WITH US MISTAKE MAKERS, SO THEY CANT FORGIVE US. LET US SINNERS STICK TOGETHER AND BE KIND AND FORGIVING TO EACH OTHER, AND BE FORGIVING AND KIND TO THE GOOD PEOPLE TOO. GOOD PEOPLE DONT HAVE TO SUFFER FOR THEY DONT MAKE ANY MISTAKES. BUT WE DO HAVE TO SUFFER FOR OUR MISTAKES, BECAUSE WE'VE GOT TO REAP WHAT WE SOW. WE SHOULD FEEL SORRY FOR THE BAD PEOPLE BECAUSE WE KNOW THEY ARE GOING TO GET IT. IT PAYS TO BE GOOD. BUT WHEN WE ARE GOOD DONT LET US PUT ON AIRS WITH THE BAD PEOPLE FOR PRIDE GOETH BEFORE A FALL - GET ME?

For cuts, burns and bruises

Keep cuts and wounds from becoming dangerous

In the past, thousands of people have become dangerously ill and have even died through not using an antiseptic as such as hurt.

Don't take chances, fight disease as they do in hospitals. One invisible germ in an open wound may result in a fatal illness.

As soon after the mishap as possible, cleanse the wound with a solution of one teaspoonful of Sylpho-Nathol to a quart of warm water. Then cover with a dry bandage.

This will relieve the pain, retard the flow of blood, prevent germ infection and quicken healing.

Wonderful for burns

For burns use a teaspoonful of Sylpho-Nathol to a quart of water. Apply gauze, cotton or soft linen soaked in this solution. It relieves the terrible pain, and often prevents blistering. Today, get a 10c. bottle of U. S. Gov't has pointed out that many so-called antiseptics and disinfectants have no more germ-killing value than water. For safety, see that you get Sylpho-Nathol.
